Tour raises questions about railway corridor

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Like the abandoned railway corridor itself, some of the decisions about its future course will be easy going while others will give county councillors a rough ride.

"This isn't going to be without its problems," said Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey as he and other county representatives toured the former CNR line from Kinmount to Haliburton Village. The county had purchased the 100-foot wide, 24-kilometre long route last year, and now a special committee is trying to formulate the policies which will govern its use.

The tour started Sunday morning, with most councillors—Anson, Hindon and Minden Reeve Ray Moore, Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer, Snowdon Reeve George Simmons—county administrator Gary McKnight, county roads superintendent Bill Everson, and Mark Lester and Gord Hamilton of the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association riding on all-terrain vehicles donated by Prentice-Berry. Fearrey and Glamorgan Deputy-Reeve Glen Madill travelled by truck, meeting up with the trail-riders via public access points.

A major cause of concern are two wooden trestle bridges, one on the Irondale/Gelert road. By giving the HCSA a land use permit, the county is able to make use of the snowmobile club's insurance. And while councillors realized they couldn't make the corridor free of the risk of accidents, they want to take enough precautionary actions to provide some measure of safety.

One option on the 15' Gelert bridge would be to tear it down and have users cross the road on ground level. But the historic structure is sturdy, and more accidents with cars might result. Councillors favoured putting railings along the bridge's upper sides and narrowing the gaps between the ties. This would give snowmobilers an easier ride, allow some of the snow to fall on the road and make twisted ankles less probable.

"It's been this way for 100 years without protection and kids playing around it," Fearrey said. "If you hit the railing at 80 miles an hour, you're going to go off anyway," Madill added.

As the men are talking, a van pulls onto the corridor with a small boy on a dirt bike following, and they head north along the line. Later, at Ritchie Falls, the group is surprised to see another car pass them on the line. Simmons, who's the committee chairperson, says this has become a popular route between Gelert and Donald. But the amount of dust, mixed with the cinders in the rail bed, makes it a dirty ride on ATVs.

At present, because no rules have been established, this is a public thoroughfare. The committee has endorsed snowmobile use in the winter, and there was some talk of accommodating ATVs as well. However, at a public meeting several months ago, the consensus seemed to be that motorized vehicles should not be allowed when the snow is off the ground.

The route itself was not chosen for its picturesque, tourist-oriented attributes, although there are some

Stink raised over new sewage disposal site

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Despite the suspicions of some irate neighbours, the Ministry of the Environment says a section of private property in Lutterworth provides stable ground for the spreading of sewage.

Although Gladys Wruth's property was inspected after she applied for a permit to allow its use as a sewage disposal site, a number of area residents were angered over problems with smell and fears of contamination of Denna Lake since she received her permit last June. These fears were addressed during last Thursday's Lutterworth council meeting, with a presentation by Tom Reddering and Bob McNaull of the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit, and MOE environment director Brian Howden from Gravenhurst.

"It's one of the facts of life that goes along with septic systems—they have to be pumped out," said Howden. "But it's a very difficult political situation. It's becoming the norm that, regardless of where, these (proposals) are being opposed."

McNaull explained that, upon receiving Mrs. Wruth's formal application, the Health Unit performed a site inspection and did test pits to determine whether the property was suitable for sewage spreading. A letter was sent to the municipality for any objections and, when none were made, a permit was issued.

"Subsequently, some individuals filed objections with the municipality," said McNaull. "But we feel we were acting within guidelines (in allowing the permit)."

"We kind of got caught in the middle," said councillor Bill Valentine. "We had all these people complaining, and we didn't know what was going on."

Howden agreed the application process should be revised, and said a public forum could be held before

A CORRIDOR CHAT

On the trail: On Sunday morning, several representatives of county council and the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association travelled down the 24-kilometre railway corridor which, locally, stretches from Kinmount to Haliburton. Along the way, Snowdon Reeve George Simmons and Gord Hamilton of the HCSA stopped to talk about some of the problems facing them: Safety on bridges, hunting, and conflicts between users.

Conflicts may ensue if county joins conservation authority

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

It's quite obvious that the Kawartha Region Conservation Authority would like to add much of Haliburton County to its domain, but the question asked at last Wednesday's council meeting was whether Haliburton would benefit from joining the authority.

"The problem I have, and maybe it's tunnel vision, is there's a good possibility that part of our solution is the direct cause of our problem," said Dysart et al Deputy-Reeve Bill Davis. "We could be expanding into the problem."

Davis was referring to the fact that if Haliburton joined the Kawartha CA, our goals—one of which would be to keep more water in the reservoir lakes—may be in direct conflict with the southern members', who may have more clout by numbers on the authority.

Ian McNab, general manager of the KRCA who made a presentation at the meeting, admits that one of the main reasons the Kawartha CA would like Haliburton's participation is the access to its main watersheds. Though it's not because the authority would like to enjoy more of Haliburton's water in the summer.

"Certainly the expansion would be an advantage because of the ability to do work where the majority of the water is coming from," McNab said. But he would see it as a form of co-operation, not coercion. At the same time, "I'd be remiss if I said we would solve all of your problems tomorrow."

McNab made it clear that asking Haliburton to join was not a way for Kawartha to avoid amalgamation with Otonabee, thereby weakening Haliburton's influence even more should it join up with Kawartha. He

Minden condos may cause floods, neighbours fear

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

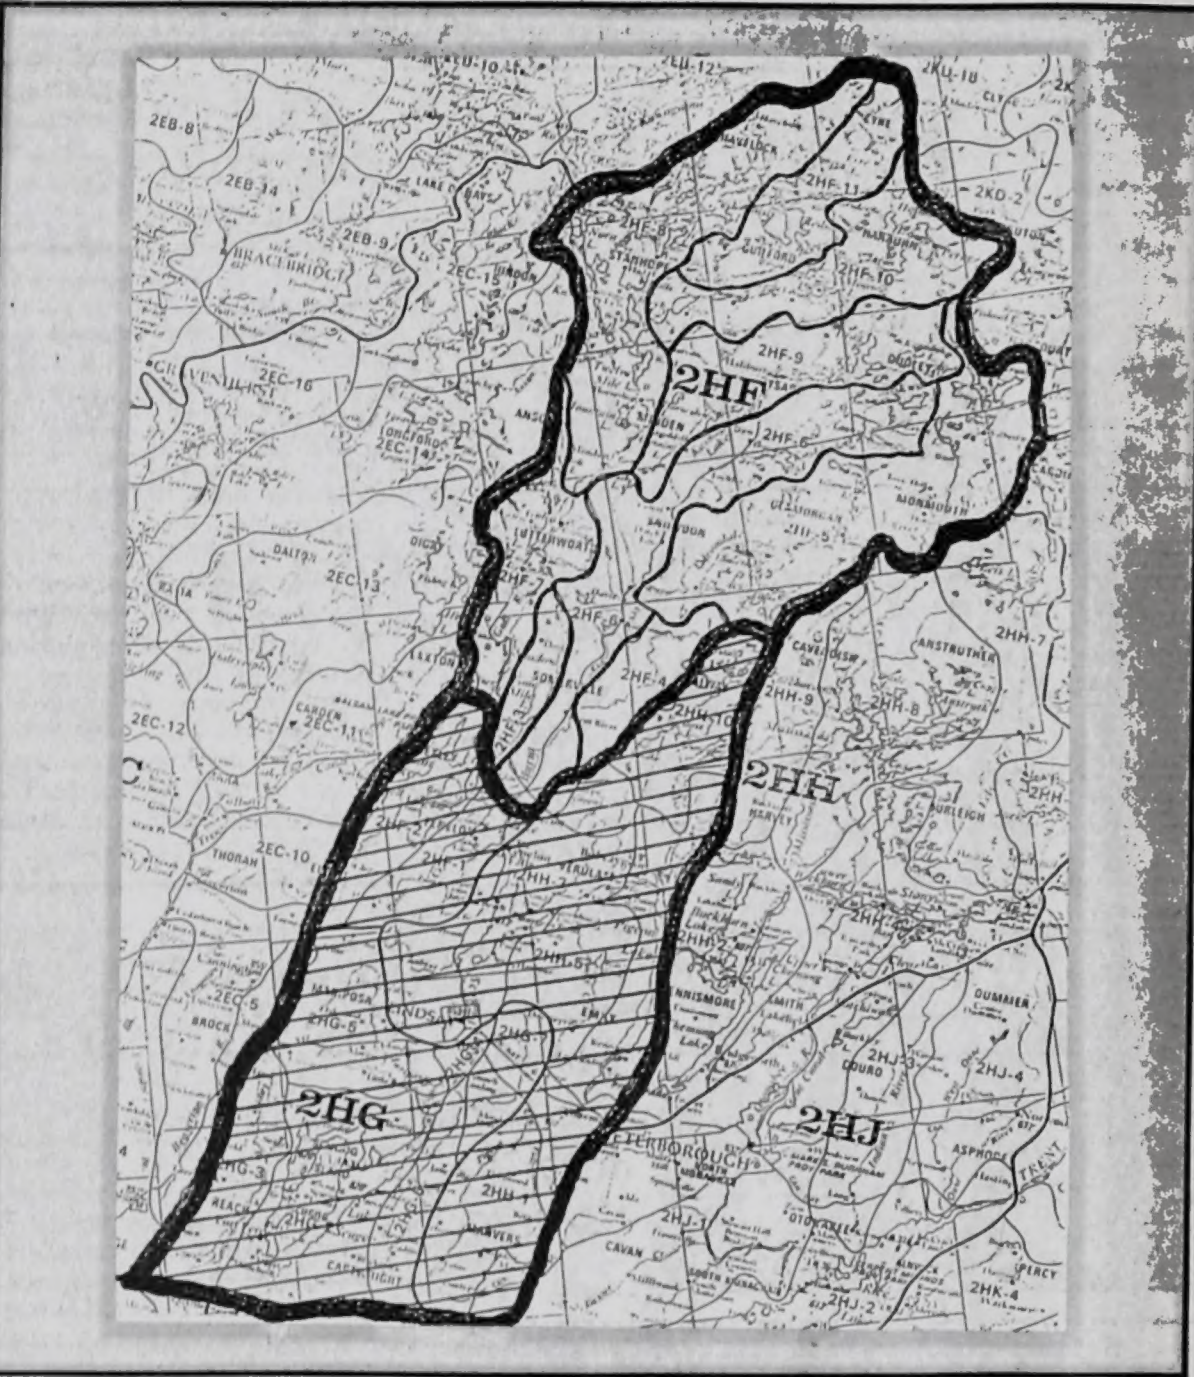

People who live next door to a proposed condominium complex in Minden are worried the development will cause flooding on their lands.

On Thursday night, Anson, Hindon and Minden council held a public meeting to discuss Richard Milewski's re-zoning proposal for at least 15 condominium units. They are to be built in two rows off a new street, located in an area off Prince Street. Milewski, who wasn't at the meeting and could not be contacted by the Echo afterwards, does not own the property yet. John Kernohan, who does, says Milewski has put in an offer to purchase which Kernohan accepted. The deal would close in a month if Milewski gets the re-zoning.

"The land is in the flood-fringe zone," said neighbour Bob Emmerson, who was at the meeting with his wife Carol. "In order to do something on the land, it will mean a substantial amount of fill. That's going to directly affect how much spring runoff we're going to get. I'm going to be in bad shape if they put in fill."

"Any drainage comes down a creek which runs through our property and if they put in fill, we'll get a heck of a lot more drainage than we do now," said Stan Blears, who with his wife Aileen, owns Clergy House on South Water Street. The development area abuts their property to the south.

He has heard talk of diverting the creek, but wondered how this would be possible.

"You're concerns are very well taken," said Ray Moore, who suggested the meeting be postponed because Milewski wasn't there and couldn't answer anyone's—including council's—questions.

"We all have a lot of questions," said Councillor Lewis Stevens. The only plan of the development given to council has been a hand-drawn map.

Councillor Bob Sisson said that some of the concerns would be addressed by a professional engineer if the project was given the go ahead. Jim Barker, manager of the Minden District Ministry of Natural Resources has already given MNR approval, provided that the door entrances be above a certain level.

It was decided to hold another public meeting on October 12 at 7:30, at which time Milewski will be expected to address people's concerns.

THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SNOWDON

PUBLIC NOTICE

IN THE MATTER OF the Municipal Act in the matter of a proposed by-law of the Corporation of the Township of Snowdon to stop up, close and convey that portion of the 66 foot original shore road allowance along the shore of Canning Lake, in front of Lot 14, Concession 14, in the Township of Snowdon.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, pursuant to Chapter 302, Sec. 298 of the Municipal Act, R.S.O. 1980, as amended, that the Council of the Corporation of the Township of Snowdon proposes to consider, and if deemed advisable, to pass at its regular meeting to be held at the Gelert Community Hall, Gelert, Ontario, on Monday, November 13, 1989 at 7:30 p.m., a by-law to Stop Up, Close and Convey those parcels of land more particularly described as follows:

FIRSTLY: Part of the 66 foot Original Shore Road Allowance along the shore of Canning Lake, in front of Lot 14, Concession 14, in the Township of Snowdon, County of Haliburton, designated as PARTS 1, 2, 3, and 4 on a plan of survey prepared by C.T. Strongman, O.L.S., dated March 21, 1989.

SECONDLY: Part of the 66 foot Original Shore Road Allowance along the shore of Canning Lake, in front of Lot 14, Concession 14, in the Township of Snowdon, County of Haliburton, designated as PARTS 1, 2, 3 and 4 on a plan of survey prepared by C.T. Strongman, O.L.S., dated December 29, 1988.

WHICH SAID plans of survey may be examined at the Municipal Office of the Township of Snowdon in Gelert, Ontario.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that before passing the said by-law at its meeting to be held at the time and place above mentioned, the Council of the Township of Snowdon shall then and there hear in person, or by his counsel, solicitor or agent, any person who claims that his land will be prejudicially affected by the said by-law and who applies to be heard.

DATED at the Township of Snowdon this 21st day of September, 1989.

Ernest A. Hills,
Clerk of the Corporation of the Township of Snowdon

KRCA needs Haliburton County for expansion within watershed also didn't think Haliburton would have much luck getting permission to start its own authority.

"Although nothing is cast in stone, the general consensus is we will not be amalgamated with Otonabee and Ganawaska," McNab said. "If we do not expand, I think we will be left as we are... And it's my opinion the province would look more favourably on the expansion of a present authority than creation of a new one. One system can assist the next."

Haliburton County is being asked to join the authority because Bexley and Somerville Townships in Victoria County want to expand their borders within the Kawartha region.

When the CA system was established in 1946, watershed boundaries had been created, as opposed to man-made ones such as township lines. Since one of the other rules was there has to be local involvement, "expansion is only possible when the municipalities within the watershed request it," McNab said. (The third rule is there be co-operation with the province.)

Part of Bexley and Somerville Townships are already in the authority, but they want to have more of their land included. However, the other land is linked up with Haliburton's watershed; therefore Haliburton must want to join.

In a map outlining the proposed expansion, the authority would double its size if all of Haliburton's watershed was added. McNab had two other options which would require less involvement.

Every municipality involved in the authority has a representative on it, those with populations more than 10,000 have two. (Summer residents would be included in population figures.) There are 25 members on the present authority, divided into four committees: water management, conservation management, information/education, and resource planning. Everyone sits on the finance committee.

Some of the responsibilities include: studying the watershed; acquiring or disposing of lands; entering into agreements with landowners, governments; controlling the flow of water; developing lands for recreational use. They can even warn municipalities when flooding might occur. In essence, the authority "plans the mandate of the watershed so we know where we're going and everyone is working together... (This helps us) make sure that development goes ahead in an environmentally-conscious manner."

The authority's power does not supersede that of the Trent Severn Waterway, which controls the drawdown of water from Haliburton's lakes to feed the canal system. Residents on Lake Scugog, who were bothered with weeds and water levels, met with the various ministries and "we came to the resolution whereby the Trent-Severn people changed their way of operating to alleviate some of the problems."

However, management of flood plains would come under the jurisdiction of the authority, not the Ministry of Natural Resources, as it does now.

The authority can receive a maximum of 66 per cent funding from the province. The rest is raised by levy and donations. Last year's budget was $552,000, the MNR paid 56 per cent of that, and the levy was $3.41 a taxpayer.

County council was invited to take a tour of the authority on October 1.

No objections over 'dome home' zoning

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Archie Dobbins will probably be able to run his satellite business out of his home overlooking Highway 35.

Last Thursday night, Anson, Hindon and Minden council heard no objections to Dobbins' proposed zoning change from Rural and Hazard Lands to Highway Commercial. Dobbins, owner of Epsilon Satellite and Cellular, wants to run his business from his "dome home" on the Camp Allsaw road.

In the planners' report, Bob Lehman made several recommendations: Dobbins must submit a detailed site plan which shows the location of the parking facilities, septic area, landscaped areas and location of buildings; Existing trees at the road frontage should be maintained and be increased by additional planning to screen the parking area; and that council pass a by-law stating a service and retail television and electronic store with an accessory dwelling shall be the only permitted use.

Council reported that all other government agencies had no objections. Objectors still have 20 days in which to speak out.

charming spots along the way, most noticeably the 30' tressle—"it's magnificent," Puffer says—and Ritchie Falls. Most of the forest growth along the corridor is new and in parts it follows right beside County Road One.

But it does have potential. At the Gelert Cemetery, Simmons points out where he'd like to have washrooms built, where the old CNR storage sheds used to be. On the other side of the corridor is approximately five acres of land the county is considering deeding over to Snowdon for $1. (This would allow the township to expand the cemetery.)

Farther down the corridor, Simmons has plans for another washroom facility at Ritchie Falls—a true place of beauty. There's a natural spring which could provide clean drinking water, and Simmons wants the Ministry of Natural Resources to put in picnic tables. Right now the fisherman use the rocks as resting places.

During the conversation at the falls, Moore asks what's going to be done about buildings which encroach on county property. The graded part of the corridor is only 10 feet wide, but there's generally another 45 feet of public land on either side. Madill warned about "squatter's rights", which can be claimed after the building is on public property for seven years.

Another point of discussion was private driveways which cross the line and who has the right of way—people on the trail, or people on the driveway?

Because people would have to cross county property to get from the road to their house, Fearrey said people on driveways should be the ones who have to stop and check for traffic. As a precautionary measure, the HCSA is placing warning signs at both sides of access points.

Of immediate concern is whether hunting should be allowed on the corridor. Pheasant season is now open and Fearrey has received complaints from abutting land owners about constant shooting.

"Hunting on the corridor itself, that's what we've got to control," said Simmons in an interview after the tour. He's not against hunters crossing the property to get to their camps, but there is the potential for conflict because some of the duck ponds are part way on the corridor.

"Where I see the problem is, because it's county property, everyone says I have the right to drive a car, to hunt on it," Simmons says. Right now there are no rules, so no can be enforced. But that raises another issue: "The pressure from everyone will mean we have to start regulating. But when you start regulating, you've got to have someone to police it."

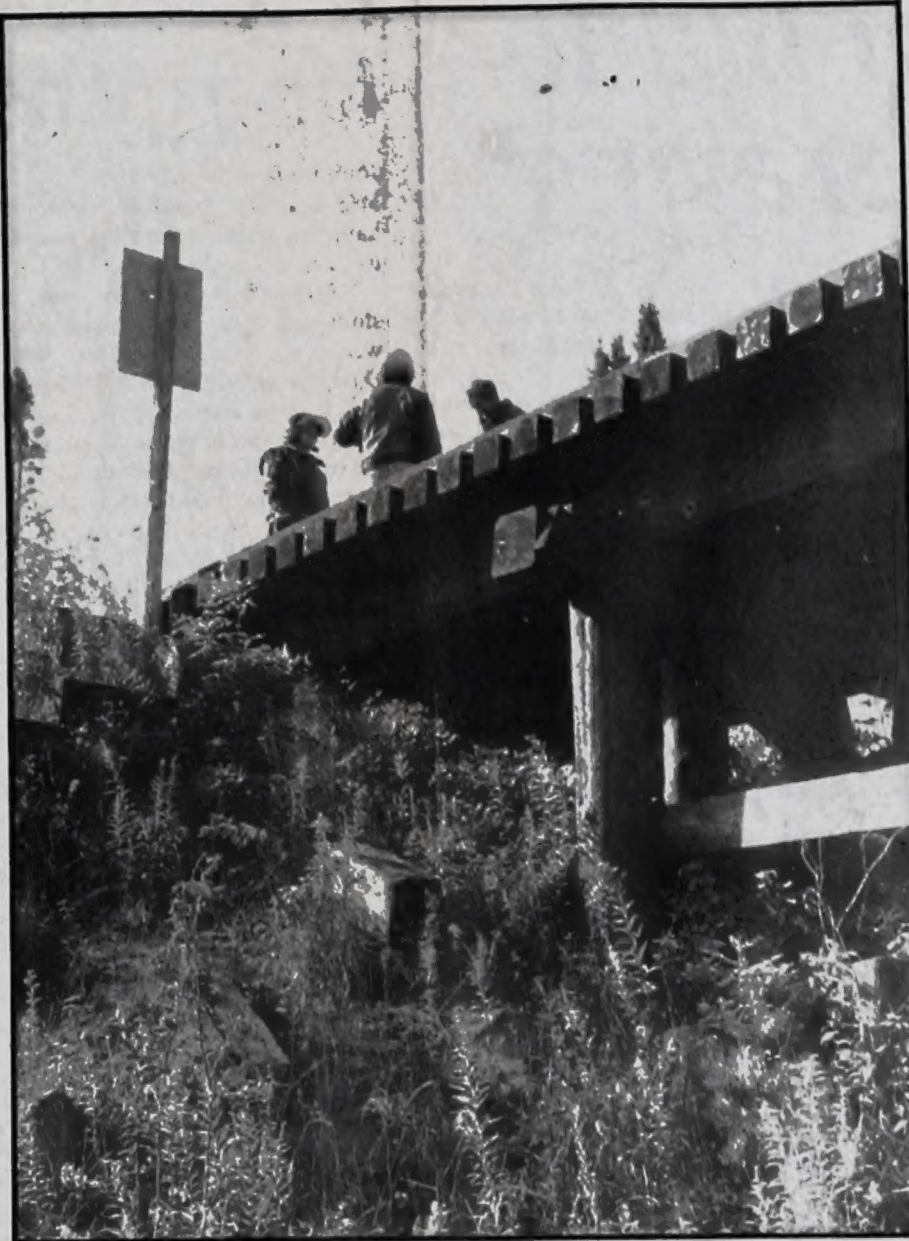

Partly for this reason, Simmons suggests it may be time for the county to hire a by-law enforcement officer. This new employee could also impose fines on those creating another big problem, litter.

"Someone was camping within the first mile from Kinnmount, and left two bags of lunge muskellege to rot. The stench went over the hill and someone called us."

"The better conditions there are, the more problems we'll have," he admits. Once you make the corridor nice to travel along, you'll attract some people who won't respect others' right to enjoy it.

However, some problems will be easy to solve, such as putting in new culverts at flooded areas. The committee has $10,000 and with the work to be done on the bridges, Simmons expects it will be gone in six weeks.

A public meeting will be held after the committee agrees on some policies.

County prepares to fight Queen's Park for continuing care funding

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

It's time to take the gloves off and fight for funding of the proposed 18-bed continuing care unit, county council agreed.

On Friday September 1, health minister Elinor Caplan was at the Haliburton Hospital to discuss the creation of the county's first continuing care unit. However, instead of saying the funding—which was promised before a $400,000 fundraising campaign began—would soon be forthcoming, Caplan wants another needs study to be done.

"After long deliberations, we find that your alternative proposal is not acceptable to this county, and therefore we are requesting that you proceed immediately with the 18 beds which have already been approved," Warden Keith Tallman wrote in a letter to Caplan.

At Wednesday's county council meeting, Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey said he found it "disturbing" that Caplan has not responded to county council's own request for a meeting.

"I think we've been patient and some of us have been silent, deliberately, but perhaps the time has come to not be so quiet," Fearrey said. He added that in an earlier discussion this year, Nixon promised Tallman the unit would be built this year.

Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis, who was at the meeting with Caplan and subsequently organized a protest campaign, said he was worried that another study would say just what the province wants it to—don't fund the new unit.

"It's a credibility thing for all of us," said Davis. "We just can't sit back and let this happen to us in Haliburton County. These 18 beds are critical."

People must start being more vocal against the minister's stalling tactics, "whether it's standing at Four Mile Lake with placards" or signing the full page ad in last week's Echo. (Local MPP John Eakins has a cottage on Four Mile Lake.)

"Instead of waving placards at Four Mile Lake, perhaps we should go to Queen's Park," said Glamorgan Reeve Bob McCausland. "We've got to do more than just write letters."

Dog is killed, coyote caught for rabies test

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A dog was attacked and killed on Monday night outside of its owner's house in Haliburton.

Several other dogs are also thought to have come in contact with what may be a rabid coyote or wolf. It killed one dog just north of Haliburton, on the road leading left past the cemetery on the Harburn Road.

Not many details were available at presstime. However, a veterinarian from Agriculture Ontario has captured a coyote in the area and will be testing it for rabies. More details will be in next week's paper.

Quick rezoning for Witnesses

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Haliburton congregation of Jehovah Witnesses received rezoning approval last Thursday night, but an Anson, Hindon and Minden councillor wondered why it was so easy.

The congregation is building a new church on Highway 121, with access off the Airport Road (next to Amson's Bed and Breakfast). Before Thursday night's special meeting, the land was zoned Rural and the congregation wanted that changed to Institutional. After no objections were heard, Anson, Hindon and Minden council approved of the new designation.

"This one, which is a commendable building, has no problem going right through but we've only seen it once before," said Councillor Lewis Stevens. When he questioned why everything has moved so quickly, especially when other applications have dragged through the system, he was told normal procedure.

Dysart questions limit on Hawk Lake's dam

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Dysart et al's reeve and deputy reeve have reservations about Stanhope's support of the Halls/Hawk Lakes Property Owners Association proposal to limit drawdown at the Little Hawk Lake dam.

"I just think you're opening up a can of worms," said Dysart Reeve Murray Fearrey at last week's county council meeting.

"It could be," said Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis.

The Halls/Hawk Lakes association wants the Trent Severn Waterway to limit the vertical drop of water at the dam to seven feet. When more water is taken, recreational boating becomes difficult and the narrows between the two Hawk lakes un-navigatable. The association says restricting the drawdown will result in only a two-inch drop on other lakes. Stanhope council supported the proposal at its September 13 meeting.

"What happened to our policy of universal drawdown," Dysart Deputy-reeve Bill Davis asked.

Stanhope's Davis said he agreed to the Halls/Hawk proposal on a trial basis. "If it harms many places, we'll change it."

County puts in bid for Gypsy moth spraying

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Haliburton County is well on its way toward battling a Gypsy moth infestation in the Gull Lake area since being accepted to an action committee made up of nine other counties.

In August, co-ordinator John Anstey was hired to do a survey assessment of the area's Gypsy moth infestation. The results of this completed test have made it possible for the county to join a Gypsy moth association, and become eligible to receive financial assistance from the Ministry of Natural Resources for a co-operative spray program, which runs until 1991.

"We've got a chance to control it (the infestation), but if we just sit back, it will get worse," Sherborne et al Reeve Don Shortreed told Haliburton County council at last Wednesday's meeting. Shortreed is chairman of the county's Forest Management Committee.

Normally, aerial spraying must be paid for by the private landowner, but this provincially-subsidized program will allow for spraying on both public and private land, covering 80 per cent of co-ordination costs and 75 per cent of spraying costs.

County council agreed to apply for MNR funding. "Now we have to wait for an answer from the ministry," Shortreed said in an Echo interview.

Lutterworth resident Lou Cataford, who originally alerted that township's council to the problem, is currently collecting applications from neighbours requesting the spray program.

"Spraying will be done on private land, only where requested," Shortreed says. "If two landowners want spraying done, but another person who owns land in the middle objects, that could cause some problems. So far, things are looking good in the Gull Lake area. I haven't heard any complaints."

In a report to Shortreed, Anstey describes the two assessment methods used to determine the extent of the Gypsy moth infestation in the Gull Lake area.

The Line Search, which is done first, is carried out by slowly walking 160 metres on a compass bearing, counting egg masses along the way.

The Modified Kaladar Plot (MKP) is performed by measuring out and marking a 10-metre by 10-metre plot and counting all the egg masses found within. The MKP gives the accurate count necessary to qualify for "Hotspot" funding (more than 10,000 egg masses per hectare), says Anstey.

Using forest inventory maps provided by Brian Cross of the Minden MNR, Anstey started his survey at the south end of the lake at Miner's Bay and worked his way around, walking the area and putting plots in at random, in susceptible stands of trees on private lands.

Anstey found the main body of infestation on the west side of the lake, extending from Little Bob Lake to Highway 35 and west to the Ontario

Lutterworth supports lobby for hospital beds

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Lutterworth Township council will support a project to lobby the provincial government for funding to build the 18-bed continuing care unit at the Haliburton Hospital.

An advertisement placed in the county's two local newspapers urges readers to clip it out and send it to their MPP. Featured in last week's Echo, the full-page ad is sponsored by "friends and patrons of the Continuing Care Unit," and gives an account of the county's money-raising efforts after the province promised to fund the counties only long-term beds.

"I'd like to see us show some support to this endeavour," councillor Maurice Boyd told council at last Thursday's meeting.

"It's just been a mess. A lot of service clubs have raised money specifically for (the unit), and if this doesn't go through, what's going to happen with the money? It can't be returned."

Boyd also suggested the township place a smaller ad in the paper to show support for the lobby bid, but council decided against the idea, as it would be superfluous.

The Ministry of Health had originally agreed to fund 66 per cent of the $1,375,000 expansion; leaving a balance of about $233,100 to be paid for through fundraising and another $266,400 through county and municipal tax levies.

Although a fundraising committee surpassed its objective by over $200,000, "the Ministry of Health has continued to place this most important project on 'HOLD' until now the estimated cost has tripled with no hope of it ever getting off the ground," reads the ad.

ceedures had been followed.

The church has already submitted a detailed site plan. Municipal planner Bob Lehman's suggestions to council were: "landscaping should be required adjacent to the highway to maintain the attractiveness of the area. The parking lot should be well buffered and, if possible, hidden from view from the highway. The area of mature trees in the northwest corner of the property is of particular importance and all existing mature trees should be maintained."

Party Headquarters have deemed that we can sell 1990 memberships now, so no one will be disappointed or disqualified.

There will be a Tory dinner in Lindsay on October 20, 1989. Andy Brandt, Interim House Leader will be our featured guest speaker and leadership candidates will be in attendance to meet you, answer your questions, and speak briefly — an opportunity to MEET THE CANDIDATE.

Our Annual Meeting will be Wednesday, October 25. Watch for details.

If you need a 1990 membership, contact Jane Johnston, P.O. Box 698, Haliburton, 457-1715; or Bev Hickson, Reaboro, 324-9959. Watch this column for more details.

Gift of life: The Minden Hospital will purchase a refrigerated blood bank with money donated by members of the Minden Legion Branch 636. The bank will hold packed red blood cells, critically important in cases of severe injury and blood loss. Show at the cheque presentation on Friday are, from left: Ken Walsh, Nurse Administrator Jean Anderson, Legion President Sally Bonner, Dr. Steven Dawson and Dave McAdam.

Assessment update still pending

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

A county-wide uniform assessment update study will not be done this year, the provincial finance minister has informed county council.

Right now, there is inequity of property values on the tax rolls, meaning two people each with homes valued at $200,000 may not be paying the same taxes. The Ministry of Treasury and Economics has been promising an update for the past decade and council recently wrote to the ministry reminding it of this.

"The rapid development in many parts of the province requires significant resources to be devoted to the preparation of supplementary assessment rolls," wrote Treasurer Robert Nixon, in a letter read at Wednesday's county council meeting. "It is difficult for the province to provide the resources necessary to enhance the current level of assessment services."

Eighteen other counties have also requested the update, Nixon added, as well as numerous municipal requests for impact studies related to local assessments.

An Advisory Committee to the Minister of Municipal Affairs on Provincial-Municipal Financing Matters has recently been established "to consider the role municipalities could have in setting assessment workload priorities. The option of using municipal co-payments for certain assessment services will also be examined."

Council was not pleased with the reply.

Vandalism, trespassing on Lutterworth sewage site

a permit is issued. Still, this can be difficult. "If you notify the people next door, the people downstream will have objections."

Site inspections are not done in a slipshod manner, Howden stressed. "Our guidelines are strict. We're dealing with guidelines similar to the installation of a septic system. We feel the Health Unit have abided by the guidelines provided for adequate protection of the waterbody. We do live in a county that has a lot of water and a lot of rock, so when an application is made, we look into it."

Howden explained that site inspections are done on a spreading over spring run-off. "There are such heavy floods in the spring that Denna Lake Road is affected for a couple of weeks. The water flows right through the property," she said. She was told spreading is not permitted during times of spring run-off.

When LeFebvre was asked why she knows so much about the site, she explained that she has inspected it. Then Mrs. Wruth's son Garth said she was liable to get a $1,000 fine for trespassing. "You'd have to be on our property to see the site."

Mrs. Wruth stood up to say she is anguished over people who are trespassing and vandalizing her property.

"I should sue council for the harassment I've put up with all summer," says Gladys Wruth. "I've had people running around my property, they've stuffed my gate lock with twigs and broken my chain."

site four times a year. "And the licensed hauler must keep daily records of the sewage he's spreading. If there's any doubt about what he's doing, it can be checked...And, in checking with the records, not much has been deposited."

McNaull agreed that the Health Unit would respond to any objections with a copy of the completed MOE study, but that didn't stop an angry outburst from area resident Carolyn LeFebvre, accompanied by Garret Schuitemaker, who started a petition along with the Denna Lake Cottagers's Association against Mrs. Wruth's sewage disposal site.

"I live in flies and I live in smells. This (spreading) ruins my property," she said. "I cannot believe there is a granite tub which protects against leaching..."

"In the summer the truck dumps on the property two or three times a day. How much of that is going to hold?"

LeFebvre also noted that spreading of sewage is prohibited within 24 hours of rainfall, but said it has occurred before rain on some days.

"You can't predict when it's going to rain," explained McNaull.

"You have some idea," she answered. "If the sky is grey, it will probably rain."

Then LeFebvre expressed concern

"I should sue council for the harassment I've put up with all summer," she said. "I've had people running around my property, they've stuffed my (gate) lock with twigs and broken my chain. I'd like to have had a movie camera on my property this summer so I could see all the mess some people have made."

Reeve Carol Puffer explained that any harassment cannot be blamed on council. "It's not us doing that, it's private citizens," she said.

The in-depth MOE report on Mrs. Wruth's property was received last week by the Health Unit, and Reddering had presented it to council. The study was performed by hydrogeology technician Ross Hodgins in response to the complaints received. Hodgins collected data during a site inspection on September 13, and studied the site to assess any potential for off-site contamination of ground and surface waters.

The area designated for spreading is located 100 metres south of Denna Lake Road, about 300 metres from the Wruth home, which is the closest residence to the site. The spreading area measures about 225 metres by 100 metres (2.1 hectares). Hodgins says this falls within guidelines which recommend a separation distance of 90 metres from individual dwellings and wells, 30 metres from a public road.

From a topographic sheet and air photos, Hodgins learned that surface drainage from the site flows south through a series of marshy areas to Plewman Lake about 1,250 metres away. Plewman Creek is a lake outlet which meanders westward, eventually connecting with Denna Creek, about 4.5 km downstream, reports Hodgins. The combined flow continues westward, crossing under Highway 35 and discharging to Gull Lake.

An outcropping of bedrock, a predominant feature throughout the area, plays a significant part in determining surface drainage and direction of flow in the shallow deposits across the site, says Hodgins.

Two ridges of bedrock flank the spreading area in the southern half of the site, and "are of sufficient height to control local ground and surface water direction and thus protect the small streams lying about 30 metres or so beyond the crest of each ridge," he adds.

"This holds everything in on all sides," explained Reddering. "It acts as a large bathtub. The spreading is contained to that area."

The north part of the spreading area falls along the crest of a rock ridge, with the rock within 0.3 metres of the surface, continues Hodgins. The recommended separation distance is 1.5 metres, except where a site specific study shows there is a low risk of surface or groundwater contamination.

"In this situation, despite the limited cover, I feel that there is minimal risk to both," says Hodgins. "Although the bulk of any surface runoff from the north part of the site would likely drain to the east side of the ridge, there is still more than 100 metres between the west limit of the spreading and a small creek within the bush in that direction."

Hodgins also points out that area houses are serviced by drilled wells which derive water from the granite bedrock. Of the three wells in the immediate area, the Wruth supply is the most shallow, but its not likely there will be any impact on these local well supplies, says Hodgins.

"Considering the tight nature of the granite, there is unlikely to be any appreciable penetration of the surface that might jeopardize the integrity of waters derived at depth from the bedrock," he says.

Change in liquor permit fee puts damper on local events

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A change in fee structure for special occasions permits means a 75 per cent increase in cost for local organizers.

Effective October 1, the Liquor Licensing Board will charge $20 for a no sale permit for weddings or receptions; $60 for a social function permit, where alcohol is sold with no profits; and $100 for a fundraiser, where alcohol is sold for a profit.

Previously, the Board charged $17 for a no sale permit. But the big change comes with the sales permit, which worked on a sliding scale, starting at $26 for five cases of beer, 10 bottles of spirits and 30 bottles of wine. For double that amount of alcohol, $44 was charged, and the maximum fee was $88.

This change in fee structure angers Carol Stamp, who is on the executive committee for the West Guilford Community Centre. Usually the committee would purchase the $26 special occasions permit. Now, no matter how much (or how little) alcohol is purchased for a function, the committee will have to pay $100 for a fundraiser permit.

"It's just going to wipe out small community affairs," says Stamp. "For Toronto it's probably dandy, but it's no good here."

For each function held at the centre (which is licensed), a permit must be purchased. The fee increase isn't much for those who purchase alcohol in great quantities, but for a small dance in West Guilford it makes quite a difference.

"When I found out I was just livid. For us it makes no sense. I'm just so mad about it."

Barry Tucker, executive director with the Board, says he can't see how the change in fee structure could have an impact on local events.

"I don't see the logic there," he told the Echo. "It's a pretty nominal fee. Especially when you include the costs of hall rental, food, and live music. I doubt very much that it's going to make a difference."

But Stamp says rising costs are another blow to local events. If a country music band is hired to play at a dance, it could cost $100 per band member. A steep increase for a permit doesn't make things any easier.

Tucker suggests that organizers could purchase the $60 permit for a social function, and get a profit by raising ticket prices. Stamp says this isn't feasible, considering that advertising for an event isn't allowed when a social function permit is used. Also, although you can recover the cost of the permit and the price of alcohol when such a permit is used, no profit on the alcohol is allowed.

The fees were increased because the Board is expanding, says Tucker. "We have to train staff and provide a better service."

And the fee structure change results from problems with the current method, he says.

"Trying to administer a sliding scale fee structure was too complicated. It created a lot of confusion."

Sharing and respecting

Haliburton County council faces a difficult challenge in attempting to formulate policies that will determine how the abandoned CN rail corridor between Haliburton village and the county boundary just north of Kinmount, will be used. The line passes through some rugged and beautiful countryside — the Donald-Lochlin valley, Ritchie Falls, the rolling hills south of Gelert — but it also has some attractions of its own, most notably a 30 foot high wooden trestle that is still in excellent condition. The corridor has the potential to be an important asset to the county, but it could also prove to be a major headache, particularly if a consensus on how it should be used cannot be reached.

For a number of years the corridor has been used by the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association and incorporated in its groomed trail system. The HCSA's liability insurance coverage has applied to use of the corridor by snowmobilers, protecting the county from the risk of lawsuits, and there is general agreement among county councillors, the HCSA and the public, that snowmobiling is an appropriate use of the corridor during the winter months.

But what of the eight months a year when the corridor is free of snow? Who should be allowed to use it in then, and how? Clearly the corridor cannot be all things to all people. It cannot be a walking trail on the one hand and an off-road route for four-by-fours on the other. It cannot be a safe place for people to ride mountain bikes if all-terrain cycles are permitted to travel on it. And development of the corridor as a horse riding trail, as some people have proposed, merely adds another dimension to the possibility of conflict among a variety of possible uses.

County council's responsibility is made greater by the fact that private property abuts both sides of the rail corridor, and by the presence of houses in many areas alongside the line. Whatever use is made of the corridor, the rights of the people who live beside it should be given first consideration. After all, few of them could have foreseen that the line would be abandoned by CN and the rails torn up.

While there is as yet no clear consensus on how the line should be used, other than by the HCSA in the winter months, it would appear that many people are leaning toward a ban on motorized vehicles on the line at other times of the year.

This would have advantages not only for county council, which would thus have its concerns about liability lessened, but also for the people who live adjacent to the line. The worst possible use of the line would be as a convenient place for off-road motorcyclists to race through the countryside.

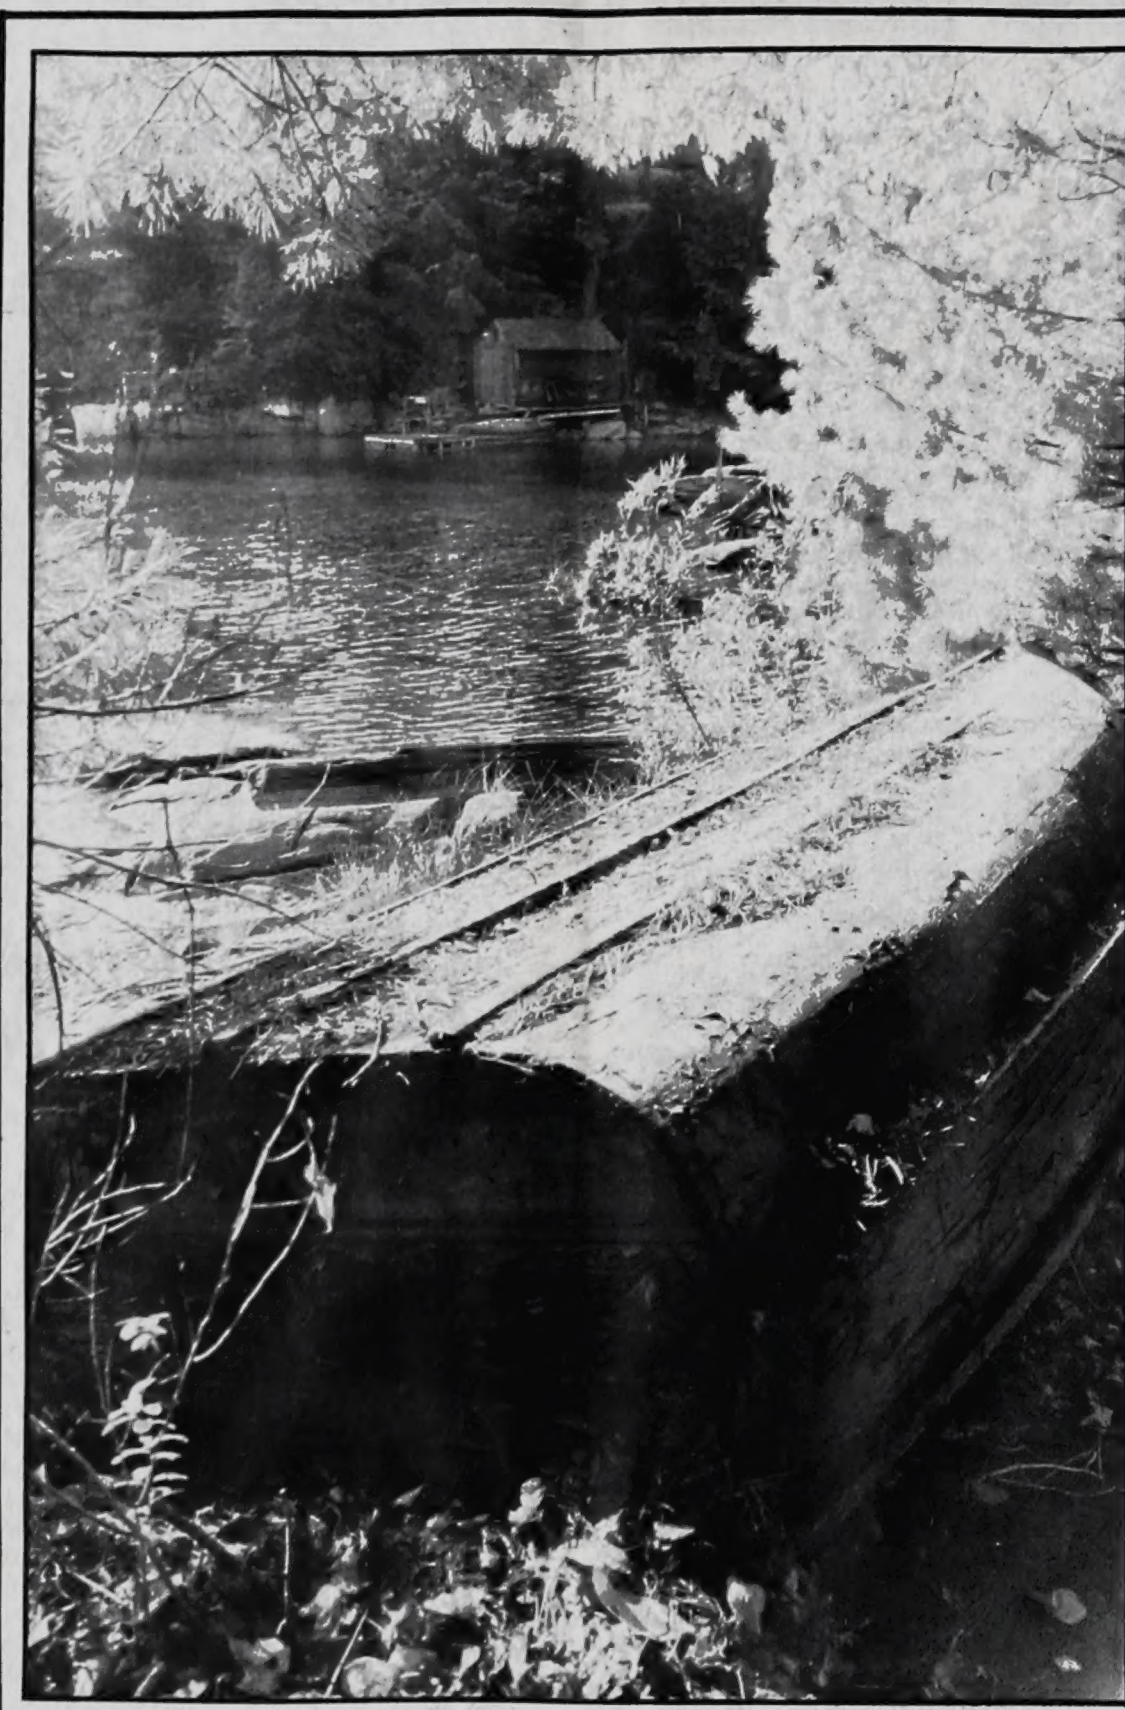

If county council views the rail corridor as a tourism asset, it will allow the HCSA to use it in the winter months and ban motorized vehicles from it in other seasons. Such a ban would not be easy to enforce, but the alternative — a sort of motorized free-for-all — is too ruinous to contemplate.

Hunting along the corridor is another issue that came to light last Sunday, as a number of county councillors spent the morning travelling along much of it to familiarize themselves with its various attractions and potentials. Property owners have complained about guns being discharged close to their houses, and it appears a ban on hunting on the line is the only way to ensure such incidents do not continue.

The rail corridor will only be an asset to the county if its use can be restricted and controlled, and if the public supports county council in that decision. There will be an opportunity for public input as policies for the corridor are drafted, but the time to think carefully about the issues is now.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

Just a word of thanks for Len Pizze's comprehensive and supportive editorial regarding the Provincial government's failure to follow through with a promise to fund an 18-bed continuing care unit at the Haliburton Hospital.

Your assistance with the full-page ad is sincerely appreciated. If we all pull together we may get our message across.

Addresses needed

To the Editor:

Len Pizze's editorial comments about the inaction of the Peterson Government on the Haliburton Hospital Extended Care Unit are informative and useful. It would encourage people to write to the authorities if you would publish for a few weeks the proper addresses of Mr. Eakins, Mrs. Caplan, Mr. Peterson, Head of St. Joseph's Hospital Board. Each letter reflects a real concern and takes a bit of time and trouble so would carry a lot of weight.

Yours truly,

Isobel Clee,

Free spirits

To the Editor:

What's this I read in the Echo about "poetry published in small-town newspapers is a testimonial to the values and mores of the community is reflects. Whether it is good or bad, it should be published for that reason alone"? That, Ms. Greenhill, author of that statement, is crap, this kind of odoriferous crap dished out by academics who feed off government largess and who have an opinion of themselves that far outstrips their worth.

A real live writer is a free spirit who lives or dies on the merit of his or her work—any kind of writer. I have lunch with a group of writers every Friday throughout the winter. The group was started by John D. MacDonald and McKinley Kanter, both giants of fiction writing, one a Pulitzer prize winner. The group still have some notables, but most, as with the national average, are struggling to make the rent and put a decent meal on the table. One has a disability that distorts the words he reads. He's struggled with his problem and in the process has written a charming book about children and nature. He's working on another book while washing cars for a hand-to-mouth living. The Pulitzer prize winner's son, a starving garret artist type, has written a creditable book on the father-son relationship. He has recently licked alcoholism, brought on partly by the frustration of rejection, and now drives a cab while trying to finish a second book and pay off his debts.

I could quote scores of examples. Writing is a gamble. It's also a competition. You perform your craft better than anyone else and you will be published—if you happen to produce the right story at the right time and if it is seen by the right editor. You write something that will not sell and it will be rejected. I've written more than 30 books and sold only half of them. And that's not unusual. The public hears about successes, seldom failures. Mario Puzo, Sean Flannery and other name writers I could mention, have recently had books rejected after collecting huge advances which they will have to return.

Writers must have an ego. That is a fact. Without supreme confidence, one cannot pick oneself up after multiple rejections of a work that has taken years to produce. If Ms. Greenhill wants to come out of her ivory tower and learn the facts of life, what it is like to be a real writer, the odds she would have to face, let her read Michael Seidman's From Printout to Published, Sandia Publishing 1988.

I'm appalled by people who expect to have badly written work published. Jimmy Stewart, a man whose work as an actor I revere, has published a book of poems. He now sits in Hollywood book stores signing a work that is no better than a collection of poems any one of us could write.

I don't want to see badly written poems in our local paper. The publisher and editors didn't win national awards by filling its pages with work that,

FEIR PLAY

Creighton Feir

Creighton Feir is taking a couple of weeks off to relax and enjoy the fall colours, while the rest of the troops here at the Echo are soldiering on. And since this space might otherwise be an expanse of white, editor Martha Perkins has politely, but with characteristic persuasiveness, suggested that the publisher ought to pitch in and see what he can do to fill it. And so, while what follows is not quite Feir Play — Creighton's style and the character of his observations are, well, inimitable — it will at least be brief, anecdotal, and unabashedly sprinkled with personal opinion, which is in the Feir Play tradition, if not the Feir Play idiom.

"We've found our hospital," a local businessman said recently. "It's in Penetang!" He meant the 18 bed chronic care addition to Haliburton Hospital, the one that health Minister Elinor Caplan refuses to fund. The architect's plans for the Haliburton addition haven't been spirited away to Penetang, but it seems the money, our money, the money the government wrenches from our pockets every minute of the day through one tax or another, has. Caplan's health ministry is spending $7-million to build a recreational facility on a hospital for the criminally insane in Penetang, while Haliburton's hospital expansion languishes in bureaucratic limbo, awaiting the results of another study that may or may not confirm a need that the district health council identified long ago. It may be wrongheaded to see it this way, but it's hard for local people to understand why a recreation centre for criminally insane people has higher priority with the Ministry of Health than does the expansion project for which so many people in this community have worked so long and hard.

Still on the subject of the hospital expansion project, the full page advertisement that ran in last week's Echo has generated a good deal of interest among readers, several of whom have pointed out that it would have been easier for them to clip sign, and mail the ad to the appropriate government representatives if we had included their addresses. We apologize for the oversight, which occurred because of the usual last minute production pressures. You can mail the page — extra copies are available at The Echo — if you've already consigned last week's issue to the recycling bin or the bottom of the bird cage — to:

Congratulations to Anne Larcade, owner of Intra Town and Country Travel Consultants in Haliburton, who recently decided to expand her business to Minden. The new office on Minden's main street was officially opened last Wednesday, and more than 80 people were on hand for the occasion. Anne and her staff have built their business on customer service, and it's always gratifying to see something grow from an idea to a viable business, employing people and serving a community need. Anne has recently decided to add a powerful computer system which will greatly enhance her company's ability to meet the increasingly sophisticated demands of her customers. For more on this expanding travel business, see reporter Susan Grober's feature story elsewhere in this issue.

The issue of water level continues to be a contentious one in Haliburton County, and it's not hard to understand why if you've been anywhere near the Gull River lately. For much of the past month, the river has been flowing near the top of its banks as it passes through Minden. In the meantime, lakes feeding the river have dropped to their late season lows, causing the usual problems for cottagers and boaters. And the weekly Trent Severn Waterway report published in The Echo has consistently said that the Kawartha Lakes are "at or near their maximum navigation ranges." There's plenty of water in the Kawartha's, and most of it came from Haliburton County! No one has ever been able to come up with a satisfactory explanation of why the Kawartha Lakes have to be held near their maximum, while the lakes in Haliburton plunge three, four, or even 10 feet by late summer. If it's because the locks consume great quantities, let Parks Canada admit it. It's because a minimum flow must be maintained in the Otonabee River to flush Peterborough's sewage downstream and through Rice Lake, let's make that plain. What people in Haliburton County need is the facts, and so far no one, not even the Haliburton Highlands Water Levels Advisory Committee, has been able to get them. In the meantime, frustration and anger over the drawdown persists, and only an enlarged reservoir system — which would probably be prohibitively expensive to create — or a reduction in the allocation of water to the Kawartha's from Haliburton County Lakes, will ease our sense of indignation. It's a battle that may never be won, but no cottage association or local politician is ready to raise the white flag of surrender just yet.

POINTS OF VIEW

Of racing pigs and cockroaches

Harvey
Clarke

A COUPLE OF WEEKS AGO, when I was commenting on how humans relate to animals, I passed over a story about pig racing in England that I had clipped a year or so ago — figured it was just a passing fad.

Little did I know: a reader in the Kinmount area has pointed out how I missed the 'local' angle in my animal item — it seems there was a pig race at this year's Kinmount Fair, which was apparently enjoyed by an enthusiastic crowd.

I guess you can't win them all, and if I had grasped the fact that the prancing pigs had made it to the area, I can assure you I would have been happy to plug the racing porkers...

But if our relationships with animals are strange, they still don't compare with how we relate to insects. In many cases people seem to be terrified of them, and as a recent news story pointed out, this can have horrible side effects.

It was just about six weeks ago when a young teenager fell 60 feet to her death in the Elora Gorge. She was startled by the screams of a friend standing beside her — who was panicked by the sight of a spider.

Years ago, a man I worked with came in one morning on crutches with a broken ankle he had sustained when he fled from wasps he had angered. He had hammered on a railway tie he had used to terrace his lawn — and brought them out in full force.

I think most of us can relate to that — with the hair rising slightly on our necks — just as we can relate to an accident near Chicoutimi, P.Q. in June when a cargo of 270 beehives fell off a truck onto the highway.

Fortunately it was dark, and the bees apparently weren't awake enough to swarm and sting. Because they would wake up mad in the morning and endanger neighboring residents, police say, the hives were bulldozed into a pit and buried.

If that story doesn't give you the creeps, then maybe you'd be interested in a franchise from a couple of Edmonton entrepreneurs, Jim Ryan and Gerry Hilchie. Their sideline is collecting wasps.

Workers in the nearby Devon Botanical Gardens and others, report locations of stinging wasps to these two gutsy guys, who simply plug the entrance hole in the papery wasp's nest with a Kleenex, dump it in a box and take it back to their lab.

There, they vacuum out the inhabitants and freeze them. The stinging females are sorted out from the harmless males, and the former are packaged up for shipment to a pharmaceutical firm in the U.S. where the venom is used in 'sting therapy' to desensitize people who are allergic to stings.

Half a kilogram of live, female wasps will bring them between $450 and $650 — and as far as I'm concerned, they can have it!

I don't know if they send them by mail or not, but apparently the U.S. Postal Service isn't the most reliable carrier if you have little, live items. According to a Florida man, who was running a cockroach contest, one third of the entries had been killed before they arrived.

The biggest bug submitted to the pest control company that ran the contest was to win $1,000 — dead or alive — and was to be enshrined in the Smithsonian Institution.

In case your knowledge is restricted to our smaller, Canadian-type pests, get ready for the Virginia university professor who likes to start off each year's entomology classes by passing around giant hissing cockroaches from Madagascar to get the students' attention. He says it works pretty well.

Down in Tampa where they sell these mouse-sized — think about that — insects as pets, they are a little concerned that they may spread into the local bug population. The've asked the owner of The Critter Shop to stop selling them as pets, after one owner set his four beloved bugs free for fear they would be destroyed by the authorities.

It was just that fear — that they would get away and spread throughout the U.S. South, threatening agriculture and tourism — that led to the news story about banning them that caused their owner to free them.

The owner of the shop that was selling the roaches, who is helping the Department of Agriculture in their search for the missing specimens, says they have been a popular pet because they are 'trendy, cheap to feed and easy to maintain.'

I can't tell you how long it might take for hissing cockroaches to spread to Haliburton — if nobody decides to import them for racing at a fall fair — because I don't know if cockroaches can fly.

If it has to walk, it could take a few years yet...

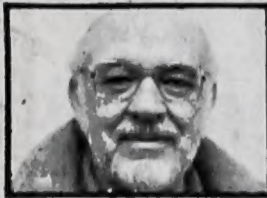

Pic of the Past

With the hunting season fast approaching, it seemed appropriate this week to share with our readers this intriguing glimpse into the way things used to be.

These women, exuding confidence and pride in having bagged so many partridges and rabbits for their families' larders, no doubt are wearing the latest in outdoor attire for their era. We have been unable to identify the women. If any of our readers recognises them and can provide more information, we'd be pleased to pass share it in a future issue.

Fruits of success not always ripe

AS OTHERS SEE IT

Bob Giuliano

I'VE BEEN REFLECTING on a line from a book that will not let go. It said something like: "We must face the weakness of the strong if our world is to be human again." I must confess that it hits me between the eyes. Wrestling with that is more like wrestling with a confession that won't come out. I can see it in our culture, but to get it fixed in me is more difficult. Let's work form the outside in.

When a community is strong, developing, booming, the strong and energetic are pressing it forward. There is no looking back. It is a time to exploit the moment and entrepreneurs particularly, cast caution to the wind and run with it. Vision narrows. The spin-off, the larger concerns are set aside for the time being while all systems are go. The human costs are rarely factored into the equation.

In the city a couple of years ago Real Estate was in a passion. A holiday for a real estate agent was to go with their colleagues to play weekend war games. It was leaning to plan strategy and how to spot the weaknesses of the opposition. It build solidarity and determined confidence. It also taught how to kill. Close in and have no mercy. Mercy was a weakness!

That is a little frightening. A kind of tunnel vision develops. No one knows when enough is enough. Restraint is unheard of. Simone Weil, that Jewish saint of our time, said near her death that,

"A tree always dies from the top down. The leaves and fruit of the tree are simply a waste of energy if one wants only to go higher." There's something like that in what I'm struggling with. If the daily fruit—the process of growing—is of no consequence and our only desire is to go higher and higher, bigger and bigger—a great deal gets overlooked, neglected.

Listen to the profound thinking of the strong, say in business: "more is always better"; "If you aren't going ahead you're going behind"; (as though there is only forward and back to go); "Bottom line is bottom line" (no other considerations matter); "Plan your work and work you r plan"; (as though a human life and human business is not really built on interruptions and unexpected eruptions).

Those cliches make the world of business ludicrous and stupid. Strangely the strong, who are devoted to them, never notice what is really going on. In other words they figure, they don't think. If you are like an apple tree and all you want to do is go higher why bother with apples? If a town only wants to grow economically, why be a town, why not be a city?

Restraint is unheard of among the strong. To choose not to do something that can be done seems foolhardy. Check out the medical world today. Medical science has discovered that it can do hundreds of tricks, either with chemicals, surgery, or particularly with genetics. Because these things are now possible then of course they must be done. Little thought is given to the larger implications of these miracles of technology. We can transplant all organs so we must. Never mind the millions of dollars involved or that thousands of Canadian families do not have the basic health care and nutrition needed these days—we can do it so we must. There is no looking for another way.

Thanksgiving now and then

DOWN OUR ROAD

Sharon Lynch

SHE WASN'T LOOKING FORWARD to this Thanksgiving. It would be the first since her mother died and the loss was still fresh. The old days of everyone crowded around the table, eating too much turkey and everything that went with it; those days were gone, probably forever. Without their mother, the rest of the family no longer had the same reason to gather together. They all had families of their own, other priorities and without the one person who had always tied them together, they were going off in different direction.

It had never been convenient to meet in one place on Thanksgiving to share the day and the meal. But they had made the effort to please their mother. She would never have been able to choose which one of her children with whom to spend it. So they all came to her. And it always ended up being a great day.

She thought back on those days as she drove into town. Lost in reminiscing, she never noticed that almost overnight the hills had exploded into their fall colours. She didn't even see the tree to her right that had been set aflame in the bright autumn sunshine.

There had been cold rainy Thanksgivings, when the best place in the world had been inside the cottage by the fire. They would all come in for outside, damp and shivering and the first thing to hit them was the smell of roasting turkey mingled with wood smoke from the fireplace. They'd pull their chairs close together and talk while their mother bustled in the kitchen with her various pots simmering on the stove. She would accept help grudgingly, because she did not like anyone in her kitchen. Besides, she

OFF THE RECORD

Susan Grober

THERE COMES A TIME in everyone's life when one thing after another builds up until you just can't stand it any longer and it seems like the only way out is...escape.

You want to pack your bags and head out the door for a taste of something different, a change of pace, a breath of fresh air (and whatever other cliches you can dream up).

The cottage used to be my haven for escape. What better place to go than the country when you're running away from the rat-race of the working world, the hectic pace of the city, or the boredom of everyday life?

A wooded cabin overlooking the lake was once the perfect retreat. But now the cottage has become my home-base and, although I still love it, somehow the illusion of escape it used to hold is no longer there.

Now I just fret over unmade beds and unwashed dishes. Is my alarm clock set to scream at me in the morning? Did I remember to arrange an interview tomorrow? Is there something clean to wear the next day? (Laundry was never a consideration when the cottage was a summer retreat, since most time is

Even homes need their own space

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

Martha Perkins

HAVE YOU EVER HAD someone, with whom you are in conversation, stand so close to you that you feel compelled to step back, put more distance between you? This person is, to borrow a term from the 1960s and '70s, "invading your space." We have this invisible barrier of protection we trust around ourselves, broken only by those we place. Another trick is to seek artificial barriers, such as a desk, a counter, a coffee table.

"Finding your own space" was often used as an excuse to leave behind the responsibilities of being an adult. But beyond the hyperbole, there is an inherent truth that each of us needs to maintain a "space" around us. For whatever reason it has been programmed into our genes—self-protection, ability to flee, personal autonomy. Space has become a need.

What would happen if you couldn't move away from the person who is crowding into your space? Imagine how the frustration would turn to anger. You'd probably reach the point where you would force the other person to move back. But what if she or he too is against the wall?

This is exactly how I feel driving by new housing developments which seem to be encircling cities large and small. Suddenly I feel stressful, partly due to the traffic, but more to blame on the design of these "neighbourhoods". Here in Haliburton County we're worried about back lot development; in cities with waterfront, houses are squeezed for rows behind the lake. Perhaps, in one of the rooms on the top floor, the owner can see a ripple of blue water. They'd made it—a waterfront home.

Often the streets are lifeless, repetitious lines of aluminum-sided homes (everyone's too busy to paint now). Even in the old "new subdivisions", they tried to change every other house, or at least the colour. And there was a yard, albeit a small one. With these new subdivisions, we'll have to come up with a new way of saying "a stone's throw away." Even a feather would make it into the next-door-neighbour's window.

A modern trend is the El Grecos of architecture, condominiums: gaunt, boney, long and droopy-eyed around the windows. Tall buildings used to be built to inspire us, now they're just a space-saving technique. If you have a small plot of land, would you, as a developer, rather have two $150,000 homes with lawns, or 12 $100,000 condominiums with parking spaces?

The world is changing, I recognize, and we must have homes for our people who still adhere to the belief owning a home is a Canadian birthright. But I can not see the sense of building homes which fill us with stress. (Apparently, in Europe homes are seen as dropping off points whereas here they are an investment and the hub of social activity. Therefore, and given its over-crowding problem, European homes are naturally quite small.)

Driving past the cities, you can find yourself transported into another world. One of the prettiest areas of Ontario is Grey-Bruce, west of Orillia until it reaches Lake Huron. It's the simplest things

Taking the bull out of advertising

NORTHERN LIGHTS

Virginia Muenzel

IT'S GETTING SO EVERYWHERE a person goes these days, the conversation comes around to the environment. And that's good. We're talking, but, after we talk, we need to get some results. Put our, and make the powers that be, put their money where their mouths are. It's true, there is a lot being done that is good. But we have to be very careful of all that is being done at our expense. Some of that environmental hype that's coming down from the ad men is a lot of pure, unadulterated bull. And that's probably the only pure thing about some of those products they're trying to sell us.

For instance, last week I had a very interesting conversation with a fellow in the detergent business about Procter and Gamble's new Enviropaks. I guess the way they made the big sell was to bring an equal number of the present plastic jugs and the new packaging to a well-know stadium. They did prove their point. The Enviropaks made a considerably smaller pile of trash. However, according to my source, that's the only good thing they can say about them. Now I realize the hype is telling us that this package is a step in the right direction. But this very powerful, very rich conglomerate spent several million dollars creating, re-tooling, and promoting this product. Wouldn't it seem logical to you if they had maybe spent a few million dollars more (which they will eventually have to do anyway) and invested it in building a factory that could recycle the plastic they are already putting out?

You see, the plastic jugs and bottles they were using were recycleable. They can be shredded, and by certain processes, reused as other jugs or even the new plastic wood. The main problem being that there aren't enough recycling plants to handle what

The whistle blew and the Redmen ran, rallying for sweet 1-point win

Success over LCVI is a sweet 9-8

Victory is always sweet, but never moreso than when it comes at the hands of a team you haven't bettered in four years. And that's why the jubilation of Haliburton senior Redmen football team was a little more intense than usual last Friday when the final whistle sounded in their season opening game against LCVI. The Redmen had come back from a 7-3 deficit to take a 9-8 win over their arch rivals — the best possible beginning for their 1989 season.

The Redmen looked strong in a number of areas. Their kicking game was outstanding, and in fact it was kicks that put the first three points on the board for the local boys. The Redmen scored a single point when they punched the opening kickoff into the end-zone, then scored another on a deep punt and a third on a missed field goal attempt by Brent Flood, all in the first quarter.

In the second quarter the Redmen got within six yards of a touchdown, but were held out three times when they tried to sweep around the ends and ran into LCVI cornerbacks who knew how to contain the outside rush.

The third quarter saw both teams trying to grind out yardage on the ground with varying success, but neither side added a point.

The visitors came close to taking the game away in the fourth quarter when they capitalized on an interception and marched in for six points, then added another on the conversion.

With the three minute flag up, it appeared the Redmen would be unable to stage a comeback, but that was before quarterback Sean Perrin decided to abandon the ground game and take to the air. He found Brent Flood on a 28 yard pass that moved the Redmen out from deep in their own territory, and two plays later, Perrin launched another bomb that Flood snagged for a 40 yard gain. With time running out, Craig Bain plunged over for the TD and Haliburton led 9-7.

LCVI was not out of the game, however. They took Haliburton's kickoff and marched to within field goal range, but missed the attempt in the final seconds and had to settle for a single point, enabling the Redmen to hang on for a 9-8 win.

Head coach Gary Brohman attributed the win to a strong kicking game, and excellent play from Brent Flood, Kyle Hewitt and Mark Robinson.

He'll spend the week working on improvements to the inside running and short passing game, in preparation for a trip to Fenelon Falls this Friday, where the Redmen will be looking for an easier win.

The Junior Redmen, in the midst of a rebuilding year, were not as successful as their senior counter-

Field hockey does everything in twos

The HHSS girls field hockey team chalked up a win, two ties and two losses on Saturday as they competed in a 24 team exhibition tournament in Scarborough.

Haliburton capitalized on their superior offense to score a 2-0 win over Scarborough's Thomson Collegiate, on goals by Abby Burk and Lora Patton.

Nicki Vachon earned the shutout in the Haliburton net.

The local girls played to scoreless ties against Bishop Strachan of Toronto, with Andrea Cowan in goal, and against John Diefenbaker secondary school, with Melanie Duchene guarding the net for Haliburton.

The team's only losses of the day both ended 2-0 against Chinguacousy of Peel County, and against Scarborough's Leacock Collegiate, last year's

An HHSS ball carrier is about to be team tackled by Lindsay defenders during last Friday's season-opening game in Haliburton. The local boys came from behind in the final three minutes to win by a single point. It was Haliburton's first win over LCVI in four years, an achievement savoured by the entire school.

Soccer teams tie, but dominate play

Ties were the order of the day last Wednesday as the Haliburton high school soccer teams travelled to Lindsay to challenge I. E. Weldon.

The seniors battled to a scoreless tie, despite dominating play in the second half, when Haliburton kept the ball in the Weldon end most of the time. The Redmen had several good opportunities but were unable to put the ball into the Weldon net.

Outstanding players for the seniors were goalkeeper David Kinsella, full back Roland Greber and forwards Cecil Smith and Jan Haedicke.

The Redmen will see action again this Wednesday when they'll have home field advantage against LCVI. Kickoff time is 2 p.m.

The junior Redmen were held to a 2-2 tie against Weldon. In a similar pattern to the senior game, play was mostly even in the first half but in the second, Haliburton dominated on the field, if not on the scoreboard. Technical frustrations, including a goal on penalty shot that was annulled, prevented the junior Redmen from taking the game.

Kevin Buchanan opened the scoring for Haliburton in the first half, and Dave Carr booted in the second goal early in the second half. Bruce Milne played a strong game in net, as did Jason Donaldson and Darren Parsons in their halfback positions.

The Juniors will take on LCVI at home this Wednesday in the first encounter of the season between the two teams.

District 11 of the Ontario Senior Games, comprised of Haliburton and Muskoka counties, held play-offs in Haliburton and Huntsville last week. On Tuesday September 19, 28 contestants travelled to Huntsville for competition in bridge and shuffleboard at the Seniors Club 55. Haliburton's bridge players, Cecile and Alex McLeod, brought home the gold medal. Silver medal winners were Phyllis McCarroll and Ivy Leonard of Muskoka while Donna and Stan Zajczek also of Muskoka won the bronze. In shuffleboard, Haliburton was again the winner with Mae and Gord Jones of Minden capturing the gold. Silver went to Charles Wilson and Miriam Hannah and the bronze to Reef Wilcox and Alice McKinnon of the Muskoka area. The awards were presented following a luncheon at the Huntsville Centennial Centre.

Haliburton's regular season got underway Tuesday, with home games against Thomas A. Stewart of Peterborough, and Lindsay Collegiate.

Next Thursday, Haliburton will again be at home against Bethany Hills. The regular season will wind up in Lindsay on October 12, when the local girls will face Lakefield and St. Peter's.

If Haliburton finishes in the top three of the six team league, they'll advance to the Kawartha tournament on Monday, October 23. A top four finish there would qualify them for the COSSA championship on Thursday, October 26.

The local girls will also play in an exhibition tournament in Toronto on Saturday, October 14.

parts, coming out on the short end of a 22-6 score.

The Junior Redmen's only touchdown came in the second quarter when Jay Hughes picked up a blocked field goal kick and ran 70 yards to put six points on the board.

Despite the loss, coach Brohman said the game was "a good learning experience" for the juniors, many of whom were playing their first ever football game.

They too, will be looking for improvements when they meet Fenelon Falls this Friday.

Log cabin project in Haliburton Forest helps Barrie students build self esteem

Mark McGee uses a little muscle to lay a roof truss on top of a cabin he and seven other Barrie students built on Black Lake last week.

'These kids know how to do almost anything,' says carpentry teacher Wally Van Dyke. Jim McGee and Greg Abbott try to prove their instructor right.

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

ALL THIS GROUP OF STUDENTS from Barrie's Innisdale Secondary School needed was a chance to prove themselves. And they found that chance...in Haliburton County.

Last week a group of eight building construction students from Barrie came to Peter Schleifenbaum's Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Preserve and built a four-bedroom, 1,100 square foot log cabin within three days. They weren't paid for their efforts, and may never get a chance to visit the cabin again. But these young men had the opportunity to put the skills learned at school to work on a real job, proving to themselves, and others, the values of a technical education.

"This is an investment into the future of Canada," says Bob Read, technical director at Innisdale. "A true apprenticeship doesn't begin until after high school, but these kids are getting an experience they couldn't get anywhere else. And business people will have the chance to hire top quality, trained individuals."

This building project, paid for by Schleifenbaum, is a result of the provincially and federally funded Skills Canada program currently being run out of Barrie's Community Industrial Training Committee (CITC) office.

This project in Barrie—which is aimed toward promoting technical students—has received federal funding through the government's Innovations program, with a 20-month commitment of $225,000, which was accepted in April. The provincial government granted an additional $100,000.

Read says the focus of Barrie's Skills Canada project is to formulate itself after the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) group which has been active for many years in the United States.

"We invite builders, electricians and other such people into the schools to see what kinds of projects they could involve our students in," says Read. "We try to keep a constant interaction between our students and the business community."

The students rebuilt a hunting cabin on Black Lake which was burnt down by careless snowmobilers last February. Read knew about the cabin because he has a cottage in the Kennis Lake area. And he hopes the cabin can be used in another program, where students have the opportunity to spend time with nature. But that is still in the works.

For Grade 12 students Doug Marling, Jonathon Rouse, Greg Abbott, Peter Krul, and Jim and Mark McGee, Schleifenbaum and Skills Canada have provided a valuable experience.

The project at Haliburton Forest is the largest construction job these kids have been involved in to date.

Read hopes it will be a ground-breaking effort in more ways than one: first, to provide students with a confidence-building project; second, to alert the working community that there are students learning the skills they will need on the job; third, to encourage other areas (like Haliburton's CITC) to start up their own Skills Canada project.

"Each one of these kids feels great about what he's doing," says Read. "They're confident they can come out to a job site and work with a level of competence."

"And there is a skills shortage that is also being addressed. There are just not enough skilled people to tackle large jobs up here and in Barrie. Employers will only benefit in the end."

Local contractor Vince Lancia, of Kennis Carpentry, assisted on the project and was impressed with the students' job performances. "Next summer when I need help I'll know who to hire," he says.

The students' carpentry teacher, Wally Van Dyke, also assisted on the site and acted as foreman. And he needed a certain degree of confidence in his students to take a group of eight out to a camp in the middle of the woods, two hours from home, for a three-day work session. Each had to build a small shed to qualify for the program.

Not the same as school

"But it's quite a difference to build a shed in someone's yard two minutes from school and to build a cabin out in the wilderness," says Read.

"They really have proven themselves," he adds proudly. "And you've got to have that trust when you're working with $5,000 worth of someone else's lumber. I could be quite a risk to Peter (Schleifenbaum) if these kids didn't know what they're doing."

Building the cabin also provided them with the opportunity to learn a wide-range of skills. "These guys know how to do almost everything," says Van Dyke, who then offers an example. "They know how to cut rafters. That kind of information you don't get when you're first starting out on the job."

A major problem facing those students who wish to pursue the technical field is peer and parental pressure. All too often, students are pressured to go to college or university, rather than take a technical apprenticeship.

Too many people have no appreciation for the knowledge and work involved in skilled labour. "You really have to do a lot of public relations," says Read. "That's where Skills Canada comes in."

An incorporated, non-profit organization, Skills Canada is a co-operative venture of industry, business, and education, and plays a role in addressing the training and skills development needs among young people. Through a board of skilled professionals, Skills Canada works closely with CITCs, industries and educational facilities throughout Ontario.

The purpose of Skills Canada is to represent the interests of industry in recognizing and assisting with innovative training and skills development programs specifically targeted to high school students. In addition to skills training, the organization focuses leadership, citizenship and character development programs in helping students to better prepare for the labour market. Students are encouraged to practise high standards in workmanship and trade ethics through the program.

Programs the people at Skills Canada in Barrie are currently working on include:

—Adopt-A-Shop where industry actively trains high school students;

—Skills Olympics which leads to international competition;

—Leadership Conference where delegations of students, educators, and industrial representatives meet annually to discuss programs;

—Networking a forum for interaction between students, training advisors and employers;

—Apprenticeship Programs promoting on-the-job training opportunities; and —Professional Development Program career counselling involving the setting of goals, career planning, community service and interaction with business and industry.

golf competition was the PineStone In Golf and Country Club where 24 golfers were in action. The ladies gold medal winners Vi Aikman, Haliburton and Barb Godard from Muskoka. Silver went to Roxie Beelby, Muskoka, and the bronze to Marg Kingston, Muskoka and Marie Thompson, Haliburton. Haliburton's Rolly Scott was the gold medal winner in the men's competition. Jim Burton, Jack Burch and Jack Dicker, all of Haliburton County, won silver medals. Jim Aikman, Haliburton and Owen Ball, Muskoka won bronze.

Deer Lodge was the setting of the euchre games. Haliburton captured the gold and silver. Ed and Fred Vanderland had the top score followed by Margaret and Milton Fletcher. The bronze went to Emma Fisher and Marie Fitchett of Muskoka.

The participants all gathered at Deer Lodge following the games for a buffet lunch at which time the medals were presented by the convenors.

This was the first year that Muskoka County had participated in the District games. Only four games were played on a trial basis. In June 1990 the serious competition will begin when participants will be competing for the opportunity to participate in Actifest 90, the Ontario Senior Games to be held in London, Ontario.

Travel agency hooks up with the world

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

THOSE WHO WANT to travel around the world won't have to go too far in the county now that an INTRA Town and Country Travel branch has opened in Minden.

Anne Larcade started the Haliburton Village travel business in February of last year. She always had the idea of branching out, but didn't expect to be as successful as she has proven to be. Last Wednesday marked Minden's grand opening, and the office was packed with well-wishers and those who wish to expand their horizons through travel.

"In Haliburton County we're drawing clientele from a large geographical area," says owner/operator Larcade.

"When I started Town and Country, I had no idea people in this area were travelling the four corners of the world. They don't just go places like Florida and Prince Edward Island. They ask for African safaris and trips to Egypt. There's a real unique interest growing here—I'm doing more specialized travel tours than agencies in the city, where most are involved in business travel."

In order to better serve these world-travellers, Larcade has hooked up with the Sabre travel computer system, owned by American Airlines and operating out of Dallas, Texas. Larcade's computer systems will be on-line on October 16, when her offices will become linked with offices around the world. At that time you can find out "anything from the daily temperature in Singapore to the exchange rate from our dollars to yen."

"When you're selling the world, it's hard to have every travel councillor learn about all areas," says Larcade. "This computer provides our staff with all the knowledge they need—right at their fingertips."

Travel services offered by Sabre are seemingly endless, with information on airlines, hotels, theatres and attractions, car rentals and tour packages. If you want to know the most economical flight, Sabre will tell you. Information on last-minute fare changes and seating sales are available immediately. And there's more...

"If you want Phantom of the Opera tickets in Lon-

'If you want Phantom of the Opera tickets in London, and you want to meet your girlfriend with yellow roses, we can arrange that for you with the Sabre travel computer system,' says Anne Larcade, owner of INTRA Town and Country Travel which just opened a new office in Minden with Cathy Phillips, left, as one of the travel advisors don, and you want to meet your girlfriend with yellow roses, we can arrange that with Sabre," says Larcade. "We can offer pre-printed boarding passes for window seating in non-smoking... We have information on all the railroads... I can tell you about gorilla-watching in Rwanda, Africa... And if you want your horoscope, we can give you that too."

The Sabre system is unique to this area—when Larcade was negotiating with the company, she found out they have no lines this far north. There are also no training centres in the area, so all INTRA Town and Country staff members are being sent to Dallas for a one-week course explaining the system.

Minden's branch of the agency will be staffed by Alan (Cub) Coneybeare and Cathy Phillips, a graduate of Sir Sandford Fleming College's tourism program. Larcade will spend time "bopping back and forth" between the Minden and Haliburton office, staffed by Cheryl Crawford and Heather Smith.

Because of her hands-on involvement with the business, Larcade's agency has been eligible to be part of the Independent Travel Retail Association (INTRA Travel), "an association of 182 independently-owned travel agencies across Canada, and extending to the U.S., England and Hong Kong."

Being a member of INTRA Travel provides Larcade with "a wealth of information and, better yet, deals." Last month, INTRA agencies were involved with $17-million worth of business with Air Canada, and "in turn we get good service for Haliburton County."

Owned by the participating companies, INTRA travel provides special rates and services at many hotels and at major car rental companies around the world. The organization also protects against bankruptcy, with guaranteed refunds within 10 days.

Larcade is certainly being kept hopping; she is also a chairperson on the Bancroft-Haliburton Community Industrial Training Committee (CITC), and a member on the Chamber of Commerce. And, in four weeks Larcade will be expecting a child.

"Yes, I guess you could say there's been a lot of growth in the last two years," she says with a laugh. "I'm expanding in more ways than one."

Gummi Bears and gold were topics of conversation when silversmith Lois Etherington Betteridge displayed her talents for J. Douglas Hodgson students at the Rails' End Gallery last week.

Stanhope councillor questions donations

Stanhope will not be making a donation to the Essex County Disaster Relief Fund because the county has already committed $1,000.

This summer, crops and homes were destroyed by torrential downpours in this south-western part of the province. The government declared it an official disaster area and will match every $1 contribution to the relief fund with a $3 grant.

"We never know when we'll be in that situation," said Deputy-reeve Ann Barker. A tornado three years ago did a lot of damage, especially at Sherwood Forest, but not enough to warrant the disaster area status, and therefore provincial funding.

County council has agreed to send $1,000 to the fund, which Stanhope felt was sufficient.

"As a township spending the taxpayers' money, we shouldn't be involved (with charity donations) and let the ratepayers follow their own conscience," said councillor Fred Gardner.

"This helps those who haven't got a conscience," Reeve Harry Davis said after council approved a $50 donation to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Gypsy moths will be sprayed in spring if funding is forthcoming

Hydro line.

"There are small pockets (1/2 to 2 acres) with more than 10,000 egg masses per hectare," says Anstey. "Most of the area has less than that, but more than the 1250 per hectare as required by MNR to justify spraying."

As Anstey points out, the area, which is predominate with oak trees, "has been severely defoliated for the past three years by Forest Tent Caterpillar, and this year the Gypsy moth ate what leaves the forest tent missed. There are some good stands of oak timber within the area, although the area is heavily dependent on tourism, so the forest is likely more valuable from an aesthetic point of view."

Oak is considered the preferred host of the Gypsy moth. "As Oak is the dominant species throughout, that gives this area the potential of becoming a breeding/spreading ground."

"Tourists are likely to pick up egg masses on their vehicles, during brief stops in late July and early August, and transporting them back home or wherever. Spring winds will carry the caterpillars into new areas within Haliburton, Victoria and Peterborough Counties."

"The earlier this area can be treated, the better."

The substance used against the Gypsy moth is Bt (Bacillus thuringiensis), a bacterium which occurs naturally in our environment. The MNR considers Bt to be a natural or biological control of insects, affecting only caterpillars which become moths and butterflies.

The spores and crystals sprayed on tree foliage must be eaten by caterpillars to be active. The crystals release a toxic protein when they are dissolved in the alkaline digestive system of the insect. The protein breaks down the cell membranes and paralyzes the gut, killing a caterpillar within five days.

within five days.

According to the MNR, Bt is not harmful to mammals, birds or fish, and biodegrades in three to seven days. If a spraying program isn't initiated for the spring, thousands of tiny caterpillars will hatch in May and will not be prevented from defoliating area trees.

Lutterworth looks into illegal landfill sites

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Because of increasing development pressures, many landfill sites are being operated illegally, says a representative with the Ministry of Environment.

Brian Howden, senior environment officer for the ministry, explained at last Thursday's Lutterworth council meeting that residences must be kept a certain "separation distance" away from active dumps in order to protect people from smoke and odours.

Although there are no restrictions against building near a landfill site, the ministry doesn't permit operation of a site within 1,320 feet of a home.

So, following ministry policies, Lutterworth's Steeles landfill site is operating illegally because a resident built his home within the 1,320-foot restriction. "This is not a unique situation in this area," said Howden.

Many people want to develop land, despite the presence of a dump, council was told.

Council will consult the township's lawyer to see if it is possible to have those who wish to develop near the landfill sites enter into an agreement by signing an acknowledgement and release form.

sion. People didn't know how much they had to pay for a permit.

"This new method is a lot simpler. We've tried to make things easier for the public to understand."

Stamp, for one, does not agree. "If they wanted to raise the fees, they should have done it bit by bit. This new method isn't fair."

PEOPLE

Another milestone for a glorious centurion

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

THERE'S ONE PERSON whose memory can make 100-year-old Mary Oliver look young again. Arthur Oliver, who brought Haliburton County's only remaining World War One bride to Halls Lake in 1919, must have been as incredible as his wife, whose entire facial features soften when his name is mentioned.

The two had met at the turn of the century in Yorkshire, England, and later when Mr. Oliver returned to England as a soldier in the Great War. Although he could promise her nothing more than a house with no running water, electricity or car parked in the driveway, this dashing young man had no trouble convincing his new bride to move to Canada with him.

"My brother and I saw her onto the boat in Liverpool on May 14, 1919," recounts William Crowther, at his sister's 100th birthday party on Saturday. Was she crying, sad to say goodbye to her family? "No. She was so wrapped up in her husband" she didn't even seem to notice the people waving goodbye from the dock.

As Mrs. Oliver will tell you, young and in love, "I would have followed my husband to the North Pole."

Halls Lake must have seemed the next coldest, snowiest place. After the trans-Atlantic journey—men sleeping on one side of the ship, women on the other—the newlyweds got off the train and Kinmount. It was a rough, very rough, trip up the cow-track road to Minden, and after a rest at the hotel, farther on to the farm on Halls Lake.

There was not a cottager on the lake. Hawk Lake was barren of companionship as well. Not that Mrs. Oliver had much time to spend with friends at first. A weaver by trade, she suddenly found herself thrust into the role of farmer's wife. Fields had to be ploughed, cows milked and butter churned—all without the amenities she was accustomed to back home.

Good neighbours helped

But she never complained. It was enough for her that she was with Arthur Oliver, and this happiness was made even more complete with the arrival of twins Rosamond and Raymond.

"If I had come when I was older, I don't think I could have taken it in as well as I did," she says as she discusses her memories at her birthday fete. "I don't think you can make the children of today understand how hard it was."

"It took me a long to adjust, but of course I knew the family so that helped me a lot. I didn't know anything about farming but where we lived I had good neighbours who helped me a lot. I learned a lot of things from them. Otherwise, I wouldn't have known what to do."

Once she became settled at the farm, Mrs. Oliver became more involved with the community, especially her fellow Church of England women at St. Stephen's. "Keep busy, that helps your mind,"

'Be kind to others,' says Mary Oliver. 'You don't give to get back, but you do get it back.'

she says as advice which one knows she has lived by, not only mouthed. "Be kind to others. I always enjoyed giving because you don't give to get back, but you get it back."

"She's very much her mother," says Mr. Crowther (who, when asked his own age replies, "When Mary was seven, I was born.") "I think she's a very remarkable person. She's a really open-hearted lady and moreover, she's been den mother to all the parsons at St. Stephens."

Mrs. Oliver's faith has been one of her strengths, along with her family. And it's because she kept busy with the church and other organizations that her mind is still so sharp, she thinks.

"I've been in a lot of things and that helps to develop your knowledge but I've been blessed," she says, adding that she'll be able to read this story without glasses. Her only health problem has been an inability to get around but she greets people from her chair with as much graciousness as a hostess welcoming guests at her door.

Misfortune did come her way when Mr. Oliver died at a young age, but it's obvious from the way her face lights up when she speaks of him, that Mrs. Oliver has kept his memory very much alive.

When thinking of the young—her seven grandchildren with their own children—Mrs. Oliver can offer inspiration even though the world she was Family ties: Children (Rosamond Coneybeare and Raymond), grandchildren and great-grandchildren gathered round Mary Oliver on Saturday to wish her a very happy 100th birthday. knew they would do the dishes and there was always a mountain of those. Conversation, toasty warm feet propped close to the fire and that happy feeling of belonging, of tradition shared, was almost as enjoyable as the feast that awaited them in the table.

Then there were the gloriously sunny and mild Thanksgivings when no one wanted to be indoors. They'd walk for hours through the woods while the turkey cooked slowly in the oven. Sometimes the leaves would be almost gone from the trees and they could peer into places never seen all summer long, watching for partridge and deer. Flushed and invigorated from the fresh air, they'd enter the cottage ravenously and not at all interested in talk. Instead, they'd descend upon the food like wolves while their mother kept a steady stream of bowls and platters coming. After the first serving they'd slow down a little and then conversation would flow and that family feeling take hold as it always did.

But this year it would be different. She picked up a turkey from the grocery store freezer and looked at it, wondering about the size. Might as well get a big one. It didn't make sense to go to all the trouble for just a small turkey. She hadn't thought about it much, what to buy that is, but one the spur of the moment decided to duplicate what her mother had always made. That tradition at least would continue, she thought, hoisting a gigantic turkey into her cart. At least it would be a good meal, even if the gathering was going to be much smaller. After all, you can't scrimp on Thanksgiving; it's against the whole spirit of the thing.

Feeling better now that she was committed to a good traditional feast, her spirits started lifting further as she drove back to the house. When did those maples turn so red? She hadn't even noticed them on the way in. Pulling the car over onto the shoulder she stopped and picked a handful of yellow, orange, red and magenta then threw in a pine branch for good measure. The leaves would look perfect on the table when they sat down to eat. Now she caught herself humming as she climbed back into the car and the rest of the way home had a hard time keeping her eyes on the road. They kept straying off to look at another patch of colour. She wished she had her camera.

Her daughter met her at the door. As soon as it was opened she smelt something else that had always been a part of Thanksgiving. "I found a can of pumpkin in the cupboard Mom, and made a pie for tomorrow. It's O.K. isn't it?" her daughter asked carefully.

"O.L.? I think it's terrific. thanks honey," she answered. "Have I really been that miserable lately that she'd be nervous about making a pie?" she wondered to herself as the two of them put away the groceries.

Later that night the phone rang. One of her sisters called from Toronto and asked if it was too late to come for Thanksgiving. No, she said, of course not. Then in the morning just as she was stuffing the turkey, the phone rang again. Her brother said they didn't have to go back as soon as they had thought and asked if his tribe could join them for Thanksgiving. He said they had lots of homemade bread and a case of pop and she said, sure, come on over.

While she peeled potatoes, her husband put two leaves in the table, then went down the road to borrow some more chairs. She thanked her lucky stars she had bought that big turkey.

No Band-aids on dumps the public is capable of sending them. It seems only fair to me that the conglomerates who created this plastic mess ought to bear some responsibility for getting us out of it.

The new ENVIRO-PAKS are not at all recyclable, according to my source. So maybe they lay there in a slower building pile. But pile up they will. And the way our dumps are filling, we can't afford any band-aid measures.

The consumer has to learn not to be so gullible. And the conglomerates mustn't be allowed to use terms like 'environment friendly' lightly, for profit. Let's start asking questions, checking out the labels. Let's see if these people are serious or simply playing games with their advertising.

If GREEN label, environment friendly, can put out unbleached napkins, toilet paper, and diapers, why can't they wrap them in brown paper? Why can't they accept the fact that disposable diapers are 'environmentally unfriendly' no matter what you do to them? What do they put in their detergent to take that place of the phosphate? Why does our laundry have to be "whiter than white?" What ever happened to real soap?

There are good things happening. Chuck and Janet O'Neil, the owners of the Haliburton IGA, have put an addition onto their store. Part of the new space is housing the brand new cardboard compactor they purchased, as well as the storage space to hold the bales until they have enough to be picked up. I believe they must collect 300 bales for a load. If you stop and think about it, cardboard cartons take a lot of space if they end up in a dump. And they are totally recyclable. Now, wouldn't it be wonderful if every business that received goods in cardboard cartons could send them back in bales for re-use? Maybe it wouldn't be a bad idea for some group, or community, or business club to consider the idea of having another baler that was either centrally located or portable. It wouldn't take any time at all to gather 300 pounds for a load. And while one can't promise it to be profitable, it certainly wouldn't cost as much as dumping all those tones of corrugated paper into the dump.

It's just a thought.

young in was much different than the world today. "There's no use in talking about my life because they wouldn't understand it... And I'm glad I'm not going to live another hundred years," she says. However, although children might not be able to imagine a world without video games, airplanes and space invaders, they will have challenges to face. Then they can take Mrs. Oliver's words to heart.

"You take one day at a time; you don't know what's happening tomorrow but let it come."

Well, come people did at Mrs. Oliver's party at the Stanhope Firefighters' Hall. There were 100 visitors in the afternoon, including all of her family and 100-year-old May Croft of Wilberforce, 99 people for dinner, and dozens more guests that evening. Earl Cooper and his band played several tunes on the bagpipes, including Fair Mary. "There wasn't a dry eye in the place," says Mrs. Oliver's granddaughter, Linda Coneybeare.

Then on Tuesday, Mrs. Oliver's birthday, Hyland Crest had a birthday party for its honoured resident.

Through it all, Mrs. Oliver's smile has never flagged. Whatever she's done to live to be 100, she's certainly done right.

Too many dumping on township's landfill site, studies are sought

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

It will take more than chains to keep some Lutterworth residents out of the landfill sites.

During a presentation to township council at last Thursday's meeting, a Ministry of Environment representative, Brian Howden, said upon visiting Lutterworth's Iron Mine Road site that evening, the dump was open but no attendant was present. Roads superintendent Kevin Hill later explained that the sites are closed only by a lock and chain running between two poles, and many people are finding their way into the sites during closed hours.

"They drive around, or lift the poles, or pull the chain down and drive right over it," said Hill. "What we need are real fences and gates."

But real fences and gates cost money. Although Haliburton County is currently working on a Waste Management Master Plan where funding would be applied for on a county-wide basis, Lutterworth council decided to go ahead on its own and apply to the environment ministry for life-expectancy studies on its Steeles and Little Gull landfill sites. (In March of 1983, a closing study was performed on the township's Iron Mine Road site.)

Before funding can be attained for fixing, fencing or closing a landfill site, a study must be done. Each study would determine if there are any problems with the sites, such as hazardous leachate. The life of the sites will be outlined—including a proposed time when the sites should be closed down—and each study will act as a guideline for any necessary future funding.

Deputy Reeve Jim McMahon, who is also the township's environment committee chairman, said the costs of closing a site are high. It would cost $10,000 to close Steeles. Fencing around the Steeles site would be $2,500, with extra for gates.

The township will also look into the availability of funding to help pay for shelters for the landfill site attendants.

Environment ministry is too slow on testing septic systems, county says

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Haliburton County council is not pleased with the slow pace of the Ministry of the Environment's testing of septic systems.

The ministry will conduct lake quality studies, whereby workers test the efficiency of septic systems on a lake, but there is a waiting list of 40 lakes, and the ministry can only do five lakes a year. That's not fast enough for councils who have to make decisions about lake development.

On average, the ministry finds 70 per cent of septic systems are not up to par. A small percentage of these are direct polluters, but most people simply have not updated their systems as more rooms were added to their lakeside residents. As well, all systems should be replaced over time.

One direct polluter can spoil the whole lake and most councils eagerly wait for ministry to identify them. However, some councillors, such as Snowdon's Reeve George Simmons, feel the MOE should do a better job of informing councillors about polluters.

Cardiff's deputy reeve, Keith Murphy, said the MOE will do follow-ups but it usually takes a long time for workers to get back to a particular lake.

"We've got to start somewhere in cleaning up our lakes," said Dysart et al's reeve, Murray Fearrey. He'd like the health unit to approve each septic system when a property is sold, a suggestion also put forward by the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations.

"I made a recommendation to FOCA to have a clause inserted into sale agreements that the vendor guarantees the septic system is adequate. It would shake up a lot of people," said Minden Reeve Ray Moore.

An official from the MOE has been asked to attend the next council meeting to explain the testing process.

Houses need space

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

Martha Perkins

I find most appealing here: a rock poised gingerly on top of a rock fence (had someone place it there as an artistic statement?); the freshly painted barn whose stone foundation sunk into the hillside; the sheep grazing on the hills which sloped as gently as their backs.

I feel at peace. And, strangely enough, at home, even though I've never lived among these hills, let alone a farm. Just as the row houses—for our new, $40,000-a-year poor—fill me with dread, the scattered farms and highway rolling straight into the horizon, fill me with a sense of belonging. The space nourishes me.

Yet in a brochure of Saugeen Country, the farms are ignored in favour of scenes which remind one of Haliburton: a canoe on a misty river, a fisherman showing his catch, the fall colours on a forest road. There was not one shot of the farms, the cows, the neatly-painted signs by the laneway leading up to the proud barns, the stone church almost over-run by wildflowers, which might be why most of the tombstones were obelisks soaring towards the sky. The promotion people didn't even recognize the great beauty which surrounds them. Could you blame developers for seeing farm land as housing sites just waiting to be serviced? (What do you mean the cows' stalls weren't already hooked up to a sewer line?)

In Ontario of days gone by, villages popped up within a buggy ride of each other. Haliburton Village is 24 kilometres from Minden, Gooderham, Wilberforce and Carnarvon. I sometimes fear for these roads, which link communities together, like the arms of family reaching out to one another.

In the towns, the houses were set back off neat streets, with maples providing the shade and picturesque scene. You were close enough to your neighbour to know when they were expecting company by the number of grocery bags they carried from the garage to side door, but each house still had its own personality. They were entities unto themselves, expressions of individual tastes.

Recently, Prince Phillip wrote a book which lambasts modern English architecture for not being built for people in mind. The buildings of today are the temples of rationality over emotion; functionalism which blot St. Paul's Cathedral off the horizon. They're like art for art's sake; individual expressions of lines and forms which instead of borrowing themselves from the landscape, come simply from the mind of one. A rather selfish way to design buildings.

Another book which has just come out is by the World Wildlife Fund entitled Endangered Spaces. As the Canadian WWF president, Monte Hummel, pointed out this summer at the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve's Nature Appreciation Weekend, we can't protect endangered species until we concentrate on endangered spaces. The elephants are marauding through India because their homes are being cut down for firewood; the bamboo stands in China are fast disappearing so is it any wonder the panda bears will follow? Animals need space in which to survive.

I remember the opening lines of Star Trek, a series about intergalactic travel and exploring the cosmos. Space—the final frontier. Fifty years from now, when we've built houses and condominiums on all our spaces, and the people are bickering and warring over the space we have left, will we have to look up into the heavens to find the one place which opens up, just as our minds are demanding they be allowed to?

SHE WENT FROM being a shy, abused little girl from Jamestown, North Dakota to one of the world's best-known singers, composers and actresses. Norma Deloris Egstrom was a young child when her mother died; for 11 years, she suffered the beatings of her step-mother and waited for the moment after high school when she could flee to the big world as "Miss Peggy Lee" and make her mark.

This is the whole story: touring with Benny Goodman, married four times, frequent battles with illnesses that threatened to end her life, a lawsuit involving the daughter of Lassie and more.

But behind it all, there is the tale of a marvelous, sensitive person who has known them all, seen them all, worked with them and had a marked influence on the musical scene. She continues to tour and continues to work. Why not go along with her through this biography by Peggy Lee herself.

Giving the gift of sight

To the Editor:

On a hill overlooking the town of Rocky Mountain House, Alberta, is a special spot that has been shared with a friend over many years. Each fall, we climb up to a place high enough to overlook the rolling hills and river valley. The trees, all turning in colour, present a patchwork of radiance and beauty that is stunning to behold. We sit, without saying a word, and it seems like our souls communicate; we truly are one and at peace with the world.

The work of Operation Eyesight Universal is like climbing that hill. Each year, thousands of dollars are raised and distributed by this registered Canadian charity—dollars freely and generously given by people from all across this great land. Beauty and radiance are in the faces of the men, women and children in Third World countries where the precious gift of sight restoration is received.

The task is enormous, the work immense, and the patchwork of colour is every bit as large and intricate as the rolling hills. The need for greater efforts speaks out and seems to point the way to more control and prevention of eye diseases in developing countries. As we pause this Thanksgiving to reflect on our fortunes, we can give the precious gift of sight to a cataract patient in the Third World for just $25.

Operation Eyesight Universal can be contacted at P.O. Box 123, Stn. "M", Calgary, Alberta T2P 2H6 or at 202—1719 Lawrence Ave. East, Scarborough, Ontario M1R 2X7.

technology is that we have narrow vision and unrealistic views of daily life. We live in the clouds of the possible rather than facing honestly what is: rotting apples, decaying cities, erosion of food production, kids stoned out of their minds.

Ah! That rings a bell inside me. "Possibility thinking" is the devil that has ruled me all my life. I envisioned the possible for the church, my people, myself. I became impatient with what is; failed to see the riches and beauty of today while nailed to what we were building. It was also a way of avoiding the ugliness, the real anguish and suffering that cries out day by day. Pay any price for the possible; personal price, the price of inattention to what the fruit of life really is and keep pressing higher. Later we will rest and enjoy the fruit of these day's. However, I burned out.

Now at this stage in life I'm too weary and disappointed to keep pressing higher, upward and onward. I feel like this is the time that I should have "arrived", I should be there now. But, as the cartoon had it, "once I reached the top rung, I discovered that I had climbed the wrong ladder".

The weakness of the strong is that while accumulating stones to build that great edifice, that vision of tomorrow, today slipped by. "God helps those who help themselves," we say. Why would God do a stupid thing like that? We don't need any help.

Maybe we have overlooked the weakness of the strong too long. It may help the strong to step aside and the strength of the weak to take charge.

'I want this to be the best school and I want the students to feel proud of themselves,' says Mrs. Chambers, here with her Grade 4 students David Holmes, foreground, and Terry Howden.

Audrey Chambers sets example in Gooderham

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

IF THERE'S ONE THING the children at the Gooderham Public School will learn in the years Audrey Chambers is their principal, it will be that they can accomplish much more than what they initially think possible.

Not only will this lesson be taught in the classroom—Mrs. Chambers believes you must first try to do something by yourself, and then ask for help—but it will also seep through their consciousness by example. Mrs. Chambers is one of those people who practices what she preaches.

And there will be another thing they learn from her: No matter who you are, or where you are, you deserve the same quality of education as anyone else. Gooderham students, in their small school tucked away on the hill, don't need to take a back seat to anyone.

"I want this to be the best school and I want the students to feel proud of themselves," says the determined new principal, who's as eager to succeed as her students.

However, in some ways she wishes she would have heeded these lessons herself earlier in life.

She had first started coming to Haliburton when she was three, and her parents rented a cottage on Lake Kashagawigamog. When Audrey was 15, they built the Red Barn Restaurant in Carnarvon (which is now a house.) This would soon become a popular dance spot for teenagers, in the days before Medley's dance hall opened up.

In those early years, education was not on the mind of young Audrey, who didn't have the confidence to embrace what it could offer her. "My parents wanted me to go to university but that was like climbing a mountain—it was too scary."

Instead, she quit after Grade 11 and got an office job. One of the young men in her department, who had the same skills, same experience and was the same age, earned more money than she did. "And I accepted that."

Never again. At the age of 18, she married Frank Chambers and they settled in Carnarvon. (They divorced 12 years ago.) To earn extra money, Mrs. Chambers set up a cottage painting business "because I could make men's wages."

Children Bob and Marie slowed her down a little, but not much. Before Marie (now Hodgson, and administrator of Wee Care) was two, Mrs. Chambers took some business school courses. "Then I had a job with the doctor's office doing the books and worked for lawyer Don Finn for three years."

"In the meantime, a nurse at the doctor's office really encouraged me to go to school—she probably saw I wasn't living up to my potential."

By this time, Mrs. Chambers realized that if she wanted to advance herself, education was the answer. It was the key to a well-paying job and personal satisfaction. Swallowing her embarrassment, she enrolled in Grade 12 and 13 at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School.

"For me to go back to school, it was the scariest thing to do in my life. I was the first adult student at the high school. The teachers didn't know what

Principal's door always open

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

REMEMBER WHEN being called down to the principal's office struck fear into the hearts of even the most well-behaved students? This mythical, mean-spirited ogre was hiding away in his den, ready to jump out at you with... the strap.

At Victoria Street School, those days have already been long gone, but there's still room for a few surprises when a new principal comes to town. Imagine the students' incredulity when the principal's question is not "What's this I hear about you not sharing your Transformer with Bobbie?" but "What's your favourite day this month?" How did Mr. Burke know your birthday was the bestest day in September?

"It's a kids school," Michael Burke has recognized right from the start, and he's doing what he can to keep it that way.

"The child is here to feel wanted and to experience school," says the new principal. "When children are here, they have to feel it's a safe, warm environment. Sometimes people question whether this is a false sense of security because at the end of the day, some children have to go back to their problems."

As long as the children are in his school, Mr. Burke wants them to do what he can to give them the strength to conquer any problems they might have, whether it's simple addition or parents who have separated.

He believes "you can't build a ladder from the top down." If you want children to become good students and citizens, to have confidence in themselves so they will tackle new challenges, it's very important that you start in the early years. These are the "building years" and after years of teaching Grades 7 and 8, Mr. Burke wants to be part of them.

"It's time for a change. After five years (teaching Grade 8), you begin to lose touch with little kids. Kindergarten to Grade 6 is where the real teaching takes place. Older kids can learn by themselves."

However, younger children need a lot of nurturing to make learning an enjoyable process, not a scary one. "As the adult, you have to be a kind and caring individual. You have to provide a structure which is appropriate for the students."

"Every child should be able to progress at their own rate with the guidance of the teacher. I believe in discipline, but it has to be seen by the student as being fair. I like to have the student come up with the kind of punishment they think they deserve. Little kids fully understand that—with some coaching."

To open up that line of communication, Mr. Burke has been trying to get to know the children. They might come into his upstairs office with a note, or a painting, or a story they'd like read. It's all part of the principal's job.

'When children are here, they have to feel it's a safe environment,' says Michael Burke, reading a story to Justin Wood.

They almost make up their own hockey team: Ted and Betty Glendinning are looking forward to another hockey season along with sons Brock, Cole and Derek.

Wilberforce branches out

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

WILBERFORCE STUDENTS will see their school expand this year. Not with bricks and mortar, but their own two feet carrying them to places of learning outside the classroom—the natural world of wonders in the woods behind the school, the arena and the community centre, the next best thing to a gym.

Ted Glendinning is the new principal of the Wilberforce Public School and to his way of thinking, all learning cannot be done in the classroom. What better place for a science lesson than the forest, full of wriggling, squiggly things children love to discover? And although most of the students know how to propel themselves forward on skates, do they know some of the finer skills of a power play or figure eight? Instead of cartwheels on the grass, would the girls like to do gymnastics on mats?

"Sports has always been a significant part of my life," says Mr. Glendinning, who wants to share that enthusiasm with the children whose energy level matches his ability to harness it in constructive ways. "I think fitness is important to children but more than that, it is the outside interest you can carry on for a lifetime."

Mr. Glendinning knows of what he speaks. His involvement with sports as a child has carried through to his adult life and in Pickering and Scarborough, he was well known as a basketball, soccer and hockey coach.

The Wilberforce school is not particularly conducive to athletic activities because of its size. But Mr. Glendinning has already started a jogging program during lunch hours called the Kilometre Club and made arrangements at the arena and Lloyd Watson Memorial Centre for use of their facilities.

There are some advantages to being in a small school, however. "My first impression was that this was a very old building in need of repair. (It's since been painted and Mr. Glendinning has brought a fridge and microwave from home for the staff room.) But it's quaint, which is nice and the smallness of it lets you be involved with everything that's going on."

Outdoor science classes were off to a slithering start when the children found the discarded skin of a garter snake.

"We've also found a monarch caterpillar and it's changed into a chrysalis already—it's all just the simple things we adults take for granted and don't realize they're a learning experience. Realistically, when you're living here you don't need to go to the zoo or Science Centre because it's all in your back yard."

Breaking down stereotypes

Now when most children start school, they are greeted by a woman who becomes a surrogate mother to them during their year in kindergarten. Mr. Glendinning, who must split his teaching and

Learning never ends for Mrs. Chambers to do with me and kept calling me Mrs. Chambers. When I got on the school bus, everyone thought I was a teacher. I think I was the first legal pregnancy. David was born in April and I graduated that June—I studied for my exams in the hospital.

“I did a lot of other things as well—enrolled in Girl Guides, took swimming lessons. There were just gaps in my education I felt should be filled.”
High school was only a stepping stone, however. Mr. Finn had encouraged her to enroll in university, quite a big step for a mother of three young children. With the support of her family, especially her children, she would spend the next five years studying for her Bachelor of Arts. “It was really a revelation to me.”

Time removes guilt
Mothers can have a lot of guilt when they leave children at home. But Mrs. Chambers always made sure she was with them during the week, or weekends, spending as much time as possible with them when they were together. However, it wasn’t until her children did well in their prospective careers that some of the guilt was lifted from her shoulders.

Today it’s with pride—and a great deal of relief—that she talks of her well-balanced and determined children. “I’m really happy they’ve done so well.”
With her BA neatly added at the end of her name, Mrs. Chambers still wasn’t satisfied and she enrolled in the Master of Library Sciences program. She graduated from that and is now working on her Master of Education degree.
“I don’t feel I’ve finished learning yet. Sometimes I think I’m old but when I turn away from the mirror, I feel young again. My son said I’ll always be climbing mountains.”
For the past 20 years, Mrs. Chambers has been a teacher in Haliburton County. She started at Archie Stouffer Elementary School, establishing the library and a deep sense of loyalty. Then she transferred over to J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School, where she also developed a deep sense of loyalty. Now that she’s at Gooderham, guess which school she’s loyal to?
During her teaching years, Mrs. Chambers continually applied for principal’s training. Until five years ago, one teacher from the primary grades was allowed to go to Toronto to study, the next year it

Mrs. Chambers uses this as an analogy of her approach to life. “You can’t do anything until you have the tools.”
Now that the rooms have nice new blinds, Mrs. Chambers is approaching the staff room with a critical eye. Because enrollment has increased to 48 students, French is now taught in the staff room, which therefore does not have the atmosphere of a place to come to gather one’s thoughts and energies. “This school needs what other schools have always been getting.”
Little surprise the board has been hearing a lot of Mrs. Chambers, who’s more than ready to go to bat for her school.
And her students. “I’ve been pushing for more contact with the senior school (where students go after graduating from Grade 4.) I want these children to feel comfortable there ahead of time. I don’t want them to feel apart and J. Douglas Hodgson is a good school. You need to get the personal warmth coming in and out of the building.”
Getting the other staff and parents on her side is no problem. “This is a nice community. The parents are really friendly, interested and helpful. And the administrative duties equally, thought the simplest thing to do was take on responsibility of the one kindergarten class which comes to school every second day. Brenda Eastmure, the former kindergarten teacher, liked the thought of teaching Grade 1, so on the first day of school, the young students were greeted by someone who looks more like a football player than a refuge of hugs when they scrap their knee.

Creating a caring place

“I was worried as to how little children would react to me,” Mr. Glendinning admits. But class mascot Bugs Bunny got most of the attention on the first day and the children hardly noticed their teacher.
Breaking tradition hasn’t been difficult for Mr. Glendinning either. The former Grade 8 teacher—who has also taught emotionally disturbed children and slow learners—sees nothing at all strange about going down the grade rungs.
“Times are changing rapidly. In my own household, I probably play a dominant role in child raising. That’s one of the things in society I’m glad to see change.”
And with three boys at home, Mr. Glendinning is really enjoying working with the “three girls who are all just dolls. They’re really good kids. They’re so cute you wish you had a little girl.”
It’s not only women who can provide a nurturing atmosphere for growth, Mr. Glendinning believes. Talking of his goals at the school, he says “I’d like to create a school environment where children like to learn, like coming to school, and have a quasi-parent relationship with the teachers.”
To achieve this, he knows he’ll need the other teachers support but after just a few days at the school, he realizes this will be easy.
“I was made to feel very welcome by the staff and that was just great. I think one of the things a principal in general has to do is take care of my staff. If you can make it a happy place to work, then they’ll take care of the children.”
“My number one goal is to make this a very loving, caring, educational place for children to grow up. I’d like people to line up to come to Wilberforce. Secondly, I’d like to be seen as a warm, caring person who’s interested in the children of the community.”
A decade ago, people might have wondered why a teacher would want to come from a school of 530 students in Scarborough, to a school of 67 students in a small town. Now, however, Mr. Glendinning’s friends are asking him if there are any openings in the Haliburton system.
“My friends are very envious. They see the different lifestyle, they see the beauty of living on a lake. (The Glendinnings are building on Head Lake.) So many people have said they’d come in a minute.”

Yet Mr. Glendinning did not have really want to leave the city at first. He was born in Scarborough and was happy with the lifestyle it presented. But he wanted to become a principal, and when the Haliburton County Board of Education announced it had some openings, he and his wife Betty agreed a move would not be such a bad thing. Sons Derek, 11, Brock, 10 and Cole, 7, have been delighted with the move as well. Freckles the dog is in his seventh heaven.
“The boys play hockey and it just seems every night someone knocks on the door and says ‘Do you want to play?’” And the Glendinnings are not strangers to country living. Mrs. Glendinning, a former bank manager who’s looking for things to keep her busy at, grew up on a farm near Cobourg and the family owned a cottage on Chandos Lake near Apsley, where they’d spend their summers.
There are some good things about city living which can be replanted in rural soil, as well. “In my last school you saw 530 kids from 50 different nations getting along well together. Kids don’t see differences, that’s a parental thing. And they won’t have much prejudice. When one of my sons was in kindergarten, there were only two caucasian kids in the classroom. Now he’s totally indiscriminate.”
Getting accustomed to his new school, his new home, will be a learning experience for Mr. Glendinning as well. But it’s one he’ll approach with enough energy that some of it is bound to rub off on the students.

“I don’t feel I’ve finished learning yet,” says Mrs. Chambers. “Sometimes I think I’m old but when I turn away from the mirror, I feel young again. My son said I’ll always be climbing mountains.”

was a high school teacher. It always seemed there was someone ahead of her. “As soon as the ministry changed the application process, I went.”
Last year, three principal’s jobs became open—Gooderham, Wilberforce and Victoria Street School. Mrs. Chambers applied, and was given the post at Gooderham. It’s a job she is prepared to spend a great deal of energy at.
It may sound simple enough, but one of the first things she did was buy the care-lady a new set of tools. “She only had one old screwdriver so I asked the board to get her a drill and a set of screwdrivers and wrenches.”
Last week, when the board’s handymen arrived to to work on some of the improvements Mrs. Chambers had requested, they were surprised to find the school equipped with the right tools.

staff are really concerned about the children. It’s a very caring school.”
The primary emphasis of the school, of course, is on the children’s well-being. Not just their schooling, but providing them with an atmosphere conducive to allowing them to grow to their full potential.
“It frustrates me to hear a young girl say ‘I can’t do this or that’ but I don’t hear that as much now,” Mrs. Chambers says. Perhaps, like Mrs. Chambers, they’re learning there is a lot they have within their grasp, if only they reach for it.
“Most of the things I set out to do I seem to be able to do,” says the perpetual student. “But that’s through a learning experience.”

Victoria Street traditions are maintained

Mr. Burke is also becoming accustomed to the school itself, and already has a sense of its importance in the community.

"The Scarborough system where I came from is 30 years old, so my first impression was of this old building. Looking up, I saw the stone at the top which Dysart S.S. Number whatever, 1924. I've always been interested in rural schools, but when I came inside, what I saw going on in the classrooms was no different than in the city. The variety and what the teachers were trying to get across was the same.

"What I don't like is the fact the kindergarten and Grade 3's aren't here. Grade 3 students are primary kids still and it would be nice to put them all together. If they have to build a new school, I'd like to see the building on this site, around the core of the old building so the little plaque at the front of the school stays."

Even before he arrived in September though, Mr. Burke was familiar with the school. Since 1976, he and his wife, Pat, have owned a cottage on Basshaunt Lake and have been subscribers to the Echo for years. It was in the paper Mrs. Burke saw the board of education's ad asking for applications for three principal's positions—Haliburton, Wilberforce and Gooderham.

"One day I was calling home from school and Pat had just received the Echo. 'What do you think (about applying for the principal's job),' she asked. 'Let's go for it,' I said so we did and here I am.

"Over the last couple of years, we've been making all the excuses we could find not to be in Ajax. Toronto is becoming quite a city. Ajax was a nice, small town 15 years ago, but Ajax is now Toronto. There's nothing like being on the road at 6:30 in the morning and not moving because of traffic."

When Stuart Baker phoned to tell him he had been accepted as one of the principals, Mr. Burke was in the midst of a fight with his school board over a parking ticket. "When I got this phone call, I couldn't believe it."

A few weeks later, Mr. Burke was phoned at school to be told he would be principal of Victoria Street. That evening when he got home, he found a bouquet of flowers waiting for him. Former principal Ruth Gorrie also sent him a bouquet on the first day of school.

"With what I had heard about Ruth Gorrie, I felt they were pretty big shoes to fill," he admits of his initially nervousness about taking over her role. "But the staff has made me feel very welcome. I don't want it to look like I'm coming in here to change things. It's not fair and it's not necessary."

Having aspirations to one day be a school superintendent, Mr. Burke is looking forward to gaining administrative experience. He was a curriculum co-ordinator in Scarborough, but principals can sometimes be a bit autocratic and not want to share the limelight.

He is bringing with him a great deal of experience in dealing with children of all ages and backgrounds. "Sixty to 70 per cent of the school was not WASP. There were lots of blacks, Chinese and Korean so it's quite a cultural mix. But that's good. We can't be isolated. It's a big world out there and we're part of it. We have to prepare these kids in Haliburton to handle it."

A chilling experience

But one experience in particular is one he does not want to see repeated in Haliburton. "Support services are far greater in the city but what goes along with that is there are more problems which need more services."

One of the boys in his class woke up one morning and killed his mother, father and 7-year-old sister. He then came to school, got some of his friends, and brought them home to view the bodies. In shock, one of the girls went home and told her mother, who didn't believe her at first. However, by that evening the mother realized her daughter couldn't be making this up and called the police. They found the bodies in the house and later arrested the boy.

During questioning, the student also threatened to kill Mr. Burke, the school's principal, vice-principal and girls physical education teacher. "We were told he said he was going to come to school with a gun and knife and kill us. He must have been crazy."

But the judge believed he should be tried in an adult court. If he had accepted the boy had been temporarily insane, the boy could have been receiving psychiatric therapy for years. Instead, the judge said the boy knew exactly what he was doing and gave him the maximum sentence under the Young Offenders Act—three years. And the boy will inherit his parents' estate.

"It took a lot of time for the school to get over it," Mr. Burke says. "You've never seen so many 15 and 16 year olds crying."

Yet he's worried about some of the implications of the ordeal, and how the court system dealt with it. "One day I overheard a conversation in the halls. The boy said 'I'm going home and waste my sister. I'll only get three years for it.'"

This may sound like a horror story restricted to big city limits, but Mr. Burke says "It will happen anywhere. Everyone says it will never happen to me, but if it doesn't happen to me, who does it happen to."

It is hoped such terrible situations have been left behind. On the bright side, the Burkes—Mr. and Mrs., 10-year-old twins Warren and Dori, and Bryan, 6—are looking forward to permanent cottage life. "I'm always being reminded about the great skiing opportunities," he said and the family is more than eager to take advantage of them.

Warren and Dori love J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School, and Bryan has learned going to school with dad isn't that bad. Even Mrs. Burke is back at school again, supply teaching.

For all of them, moving to a small community north of the city limits has turned out to be a step up in the world.

Sorry to hear Roy Bryant and Thelma Saunders have not been so well. Hope you are soon very much on the mend and raring to go!!

Ted Tufts was admitted to Peterborough's St. Joseph's Hospital on Tuesday where he had surgery on Wednesday Sept. 21. I hope you are feeling well again, soon, Ted!!

If you are curious about what is in the cage in the Gordon Munro yard (formerly, Ted Garell's) it is golden pheasants. These are really beautiful birds and should you wish to have a good look, Gail and Gord will show you. While the females are more plain, the male birds are very colourful.

The Norland Area Seniors held its annual meeting and election of officers on Thurs. Sept. 7 with a very good attendance of members. The Senior display in the Kinsmount fair won a second prize as well as a first prize for the beautiful quilt. It was appreciated very much. Quilt Tickets will be sold later.

In the election of officers for 1989-90 the following slate was presented by Helen Graham and Ella Griffin. All accepted their position and were sworn in by Jean Montgomery of Coboconk Seniors club: Past President, Adrean Lee; President, Lloyd Brown; 1st Vice Pres., Gus Boyd; 2nd Vice Pres., Millie Moss; Corresponding Secretary, Isabel Hill; Recording Secretary, Hilda Chynoweth, Treasurer, Ralph Purvis. Committee members will be chosen later. On Sept. 28 at 6 PM there will be a pot luck supper in the Community Hall, followed by a discussion by the Health department on flu shots and the AIDS virus. Everyone is welcome. Then there will be games of cards at 8 PM.

October 12 is the Victoria County Awards dinner and dance in the Somerville centre, Burnt River, with dinner at 6 PM and dancing later, to the music of the Mellotones.

The Seniors' 55 Alive program held in Norland was very successful and informative. The program was initiated in 1968, with 14 million drivers, 2 2/1 million are over the age of 55. The causes of most accidents are inattention, failing to yield right of way, improper turns and land changing, entering and leaving freeways and loss of perception and aggressiveness. There should be more stress on safety ahead of laws. Driving is a privilege we cannot abuse. Smoking and carbon monoxide can cause blurred vision. Hearing in only one ear gives false perception of traffic, as well as medical, emotional and eyestrain. Plan your trips to allow lots of time and not be rushing all the time. A few minutes is not worth your life. Thanks to Gloria Cameron for this very informative programme.

On Saturday Oct. 7, there will be a Thanksgiving dinner in the Norland Community centre from 4:30 to 7 PM. Wine is served at 4 PM. come out and join your friends and neighbours for a good dinner.

The Norland A.C.W. met in the church hall on September 12. The President, Marilyn Wille opened with a reading entitled, "Christian Work". The group sang "People of Power" and repeated the Lords Prayer.

Roll call was answered by nine members and one visitor, with a verse containing the word "labour". Present were Joyce Bartly, Vera Brown, Rotha Bryant, Gail Diebel, Leona Fountain, Elizabeth Fryer, Ella Giffin, Violet Gostlin, Secretary, Marilyn Wille, Pres. and visitor, Nina Boyd.

Correspondence was: 1: A letter from the Bible Society. 2: A letter from Christian Boyd, expressing thanks. 3: Thank you card from the family of the late Gordon Campbell.

Seminars to be very informative

HOME SUPPORT NEWS

by Norma Parnell

Funding from New Horizons has made it possible for Haliburton County Home Support Service to continue workshops. As part of volunteer training, three workshops are planned for September and October. These workshops are an excellent way to learn new skills and make new friends. They also give you an opportunity to share your volunteer experiences with others.

Please mark these dates on your calendar and plan to attend. We need your participation to make these workshops a success. Plan to come out and bring a friend. These workshops are free to our volunteers and potential volunteers. Refreshments are provided.

To register for our workshops, please contact Norma Parnell, volunteer Co-Ordinator at 457-2941, Mon.—Fri. 9:00 AM—5:00 PM. All of them take place at the Drop-In Centre, Haliburton.

The first workshop is "The Bereaved", on October 6, from 1:00 PM—5:00 PM. Joan Beall will be the guest speaker.

Joan is the author of the audio tape "Coming To Grips With Grief", an honour graduate of a Gerontology Program, as well as running her own company "People In Touch".

This workshop will help our volunteers to: 1. Feel more adequate when dealing with persons who have experienced the death of a loved; 2. Feel more comfortable with the crying, anger and the guilt; 3. Be a good listener and to respond appropriately; 4. Know what not to say, i.e. glib remarks; and 5. Leave with the feeling of having been a help to the bereaved person.

The second workshop "Dealing With Depression" on October 11, from 10:00 AM—12 noon. Mr. Wayne Casey from the Civic Hospital is the guest speaker. Mr. Casey has a M.S.W. degree in Social work. He has 16 years experience in the field, with the last four years spent working with the elderly. Mr. Casey will speak to us on signs to look for, how to spot depression and how to deal with it.

Daycare needs volunteers, participants

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

The Dorset Children's Daycare and Learning Centre is a non-profit childcare facility, at the Dorset Research Centre (Ministry of Environment) off Bellwood Acres near Paint Lake. The Centre offers three levels of programming (for infants, toddlers and pre-schoolers) of children aged four months to six years, with full day, half day and after school child care.

On Thursday, Sept. 28, at 6:30 PM there will be a General Board of Directors Meeting at the Centre. Anyone interested in serving on the Board or helping with fundraising activities is invited to attend the meeting. For further information contact the centre at 766-2952. Ask for supervisor Betty Pollard or Board President, Ann Meany. Community involvement is welcome.

The Dorset Public School is holding a sale of books suitable for children's gifts. This Book Fair will be held on Oct. 26, 27, and 28. This is a fundraiser. Keep these dates in mind.

Visiting friends and relatives in the village this past week were Jack and Phyllis Matthews of Bracebridge. With them were their house guests two former residents of Dorset, Vi Sampson and sister Margaret Bourdeau of Oshawa. Vi and her late husband, Ed, were the original owners and builders of what is now the Tom Salmon Inn and cottages.

Irene and Jack Clayton have returned from a trip to P.E.I. and other points of interest along the way.

Ralph and Gwen Raven have returned from a 19-day trip to the East Coast. Their main stop over was in Newfoundland which they enjoyed very much. They also visited the other eastern provinces, returning home through Maine and Vermont.

Chronologically, summer is over, but being an optimist, I am sure we are going to have some more warm weather. We can take the chilly nights, even if they do cause the temperature of the lake water to drop and we do like to have the daily swim as long as possible, but we do need some sunshiny days. So, take my word for it, we will have some more summer weather.

W.I. learns of Australia

By JEANNE SEARS

The Sept. 20 meeting of Minden Women's Institute was at 2 at the Common Room with Mrs. Sears in charge. She welcomed all as well as three guests. The Roll Call about Australia was answered by members. Mrs. Graham of Health Unit gave a short talk on the benefits of having the 'flu shot, especially Seniors.

Mrs. Elliot for Australia was the speaker introducing by Mrs. D. Cox giving details of that continent, the tress, animals, agriculture, temperature and sports. Then a slide presentation went on with very interesting and lovely scenery. She also showed us native tools and a kangaroo hide. Mrs. D. Cox thanked her and made presentation of a small gift.

Report of 38 cards sent since June was given by convener Irene Moore and collections for Card fund and Pennies for Friendship were taken. Correspondence was read by pro tem secretary Jean Lacey which included District newsletter and a thank-you note from Hyland Crest for our donation to the bus fund.

A resolution regarding Lord's prayer in our school was accepted for our delegate Mrs. Sears who is going to the Royal York Oct. 24 and 25. The meeting adjourned and refreshments and fellowship followed, and Bertha Hughes won the jar of jam. Next meeting is at Common room, Wed., Oct. 18 at 2 PM with all ladies welcome.

Haliburton lake levels now at 44 per cent

On Monday, September 18, the Haliburton area lakes averaged 44 percent of their spring full volume. This showed a decline of about 8.5 less than average and 6 percent more than on the same date in 1988.

Despite running much less than average flow from the reservoirs, and hence, the tributary rivers, the decline of the stored water has been continuing. Dry weather the past two weeks has brought near-summer conditions along most of the Canal route, including a return to minimum flow in the Otonabee River, leaving the Kawartha.

Remnants of Hurricane Hugo may give some noticeable increase over the weekend and result in conditions closer to autumn normals.

Club 35 can't incorporate now

The directors of "Club 35" met on Sept. 18 to discuss, what action should be taken about the delay of incorporation, which means it will not be able to meet the Sept. 8 deadline for funding of the new building.

The Club's solicitor have indicated that incorporation should be completed within one month, and this would make the club eligible for grant application in Sept.

The club started fundraising in June 1989, and the response to this worthwhile cause has been encouraging. We've reached approximately $20,000 to date. After careful consideration, the directors decided to carry on the fundraising, and make an application for a grant from the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation in Sept. 1990.

Haliburton teacher says the life in Bogota, Columbia is never very dull

Editor's Note: Jade Downey is a Haliburton native teaching in an American school in Bogota, Columbia, after spending two years in Cartagena. This is an open letter to all her friends and family. She writes:

Just a note to say hello from Bogota, Columbia, South America. Despite all you've heard in the media lately about Columbia, I still feel quite safe, and really love my job, the city and my friends here. South America has a real old world charm.

True, there are problems here now, but life goes on pretty much as usual — Although my apartment mate did change the message on our answering machine to, "Can't come to the phone, as we are under attack." Yes I know, that's not funny. I just hope I get it changed before my mother's next call. (She was a bit hysterical on the last one and I don't think that will help.)

However, I did get to see my first hand-held rocket launcher this week. And the school did have to evacuate because of a bomb threat; but everyone agrees that we are not a likely target. They just want to disrupt normal life and create panic, which they do.

I saw the American ambassador out jogging Sunday, surrounded by five machine gun-toting (also jogging) bodyguards. Late we went to a nice restaurant and saw nine bodyguards outside, and decided we didn't really want to eat there anyway. I don't know who it was but I sure didn't want to eat near him.

All in all it's not as bad as it sounds, and if it gets worse, no doubt we will leave. One thing for sure, in Bogota, life is never dull.

Jade Downey Colegio Nueva Granada A.A. 51339 Bogota, Columbia South America.

Anson, Hindon and Minden briefs...

Townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden met on September 14 and discussed the following matters. Reeve Ray Moore and Councillor Lewis Stevens were absent.

The minutes of the regular meeting of Council held August 24, and the Special Public meeting held August 23 were adopted as circulated.

Mr. Gord Hamilton presented to Council a written request for a culvert over a trail that enters the Kernohan Rd. After some discussion, Council requested the Road Superintendent Clayton Cameron to look at the situation. If an old culvert can be used, Cameron is to install it and report back to Council of what was completed.

The following accounts were authorized for payment: General $153,553.34; Water $14,371.53; Sewer $20,609.81; Cemetery $4,045.81; Total $192,580.49.

The Haliburton County Ambulance accounts in the amount of $38,213.41 were approved for payment.

Road Accounts in the amount of $12,623.39 were approved for payment.

Council approved the tender of J.A.C. Kernohan in the amount of $1.49 cubic year for winter sand as recommended by the Road Superintendent. Other quotes were I. Wessell Construction $1.60/cubic yard; Royal Paving $2.55/cubic yard.

The recommendations from the Building Department for the following were discussed:—Rezoning/Official Plan Amendment application to be $500.00 were approved by Council.

Deputy-Reeve Bern Berry explained to Council of the cancellation of dumping privileges to Alex Kernohan. Councillor box Sisson recommended that the Minden Utilities Committee reconsider this dumping when the sewer plant can handle the volume. Another recommendation to the Utilities Committee is that before the list of user charges are input into the computer, Council must approve the final list.

By-law No. 89-64 being a by-law to close, stop up and convey a portion of the original allowance for road along the shore of Twelve Mile Lake, in front of Lot 13, Concession 13, in the Township of Minden, was passed.

Correspondence was received and the discussion was as follows: Corner Store Emporium, re moving of tank. Road Superintendent Clayton Cameron did not report at this time because the Corner Store requires Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Fuel Branch) approval. Road Superintendent will be in contact with the Corner Store owners to further discuss the situation then report back to Council at a later date.

Sugar Bush Cottagers' Association with regards to brush fire. Fire chief Don Booth submitted a report on the incident and a copy of this letter will be forwarded to M.E. Thorn.

The Proposed Environmental Committee report was tabled to the October 12, Council Meeting.

Jean Mayo re: about Caribou Lodge Road. A copy of the Road Superintendent Clayton Camerons' report will be sent to Mrs. J. Mayo.

Royal Canadian Legion regards to poppy campaign. Letter of approval to be forwarded.

Howard Jackman in regards to problems about road allowance.

Centre could be closed

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by Eleanor Cooper

Shirley Rapson is in London, Ontario, representing Haliburton Chamber of Commerce at the London Free Press Travel Show.

Tickets for the four concerts in this year's Haliburton Hylands concert series are available for $30. The concerts are on Sunday evenings at the Legion and are titles as follows: Felix Posaack and the Vienna Strings (marches, dance music); Trianon, Brevity and Levity, music and humour; Schultz and Overduin, trumpet and organ; and Shaking Like a Leaf, a tribute to Danny Kaye by a comedian who imitates his style to perfection. I have tickets available, or you can obtain them from the Rails' End Gallery in town.

Nominations were held for executive positions at the West Guilford Community Centre last Wednesday night. Next month elections will take place. Attendance was very poor, but it is hoped that at a future date a specific time for volunteers will be suggested, quite aside from elected positions. If sufficient notice is given most of us could arrange to be present. Please consider doing when you hear of the date. The Centre is available for euchre parties, for quilters in their own room where frames can be left, for fund-raising events (Red Cross programme) for dances and of course for showers and reunions. If we don't use it we may lose it.

To a large extent community life was changed when the building no longer existed as a school. Think how much more community life could be built if we got together with some kind of regularity to make the Centre a weekly going concern for social functions of various kinds.

Congratulations to Alice and Leon Jones on the arrival of their third grandchild, a son born on Sept. 22, 1989 to Shelley and Dean Minto of Ballston Lake, N.Y. His name is James Matthew Robert. Arthur and Myra Barry's new address is Fairview, 14 Mill St. Box 2758, Huntsville, Ont. P0A 1K0. Rm. 216. Cards and letters would be most welcome. Visitors at Fairview last week included Robin and Alana Woodcock, who took a gift of flowers for Myra, Eileen Stamp, Barbara Barry, and Lois Boice. About 30 ladies were present at a wedding shower for Wendy Ballantyne, Rodney Sisson's fiancée. The happy event took place at the Centre on Friday evening. Many lovely gifts were opened and exclaimed over and lots of visits were exchanged. The hall was decorated with white and turquoise balloons and streamers. There was a special large-backed wicker chair for the bride, the lovely guest of honour.

Marj Bain has company from England this week, her sister Dinah and husband Peter shepherd. Duncan Slater of Toronto is with them too.

Nora Morrison was home for a week from Laurentian U. in Sudbury because of the teachers' strike.

Wayne and Barb Fawcett and boys have returned from a brief vacation to the Maritimes in September.

Brant Stamp had a visit with Grenville at Civic Hosp. Peterborough on Tuesday over suppertime. Time goes better in hospital when people come to see you.

Marie and Al Cooper have just had a visit with Elva Cooper.

Note: it was Sid's son Jaro Cooper who was fishing with him a few weeks ago.

Greetings to Burk's Falls and Wayne Cooper's father in particular who receives The Echo and, I'm told, reads this column. Best wishes for recovery in full from recent surgery.

Piano playing is a melodic interlude

SENIOR LEAGUE
by Winnifred Barnum

On Wednesday evening, Kathy Owns was here playing many pieces of music on the piano for us. She also played the accordion. Kathy and her sister Eleanor sang several hymns. It was an enjoyable evening. Thank you both very much. Earl Cooper had another engagement and was unable to come. On Thursday afternoon the ladies form Kinmount United church served us lunch in the auditorium. There was no entertainment after. That evening we had the first bingo caller for the winter form the Kinsmen club-Nick Farnenko. He informed us bingo would be a little different this winter. They will keep track of the attendance and who got bingos and at the end of the season, a prize will be given for the best attendance and a small trophy to the one with the most bingos with a larger one for the antique case. We thank Nick for calling and the club for their interest. We do appreciate it.

I'm sorry I missed thanking George Smith who played the violin for the happy hour with Bill Payne. I'm sure everyone who attended appreciated their music immensely and are looking forward to them coming again. Friday was, happy hour again and the entertainment was provided by Carmen Peters, Lloyd Madill, Doris with Linda and Nadine Campbell singing.

Bob Mitchell attended the wedding of his great grandson Danny Schlosser to Kelly Clendenning Sept. 16, in Minden. Rick Barnum, my grandson from Sharbot Lake, came to see me and took me out for a Sunday drive.

Rev. Burgess held Chapel Service on Sunday. The next day Gladys Kirkpatrick had her brother's wife Thelma (nee Stevens), her husband and Thelma's father, Bert Stevens, from Hamilton to visit-her. That Monday night Ena Marion and her husband showed three movies for us: Ponies of Miklaenot, Footnotes to Genesis, and Don Gibson's Nature Adventures. The movies were very interesting and we thank them very much, but we do wish more would come to see them.

Tuesday morning Chapel service was held by Rev. Ed. Moll of the United church. It was also a communion service.

Congratulations to birthday people this week. Garnet Ash, Sept. 14, Annie Jones, Sept. 15, and Ann Collison, Sept. 20. The residents wish them a happy birthday and many more.

Pearl Lyle had her granddaughter Debbie Dart and two children to see her while May Horsley has gone to one of her daughters for the day. Lillian James had an eye operation last week in Peterborough. It seems to be a success. Visitors to see Ada Turrall were, Norma Moulton and her cousin from South Wales; her grandson and his wife, Allan and Donna and three children, Drew and Erin; also Edna and George Moulton.

Ada went out for lunch on Wednesday. Doris and Linda took a group of residents to shop in Huntsville. Each resident had a volunteer with them to aid them with their shopping. The volunteers were Jean Hewitt, Ellen Halden, Mrs. Schlosser, Alice Jones, Pearl Cowen, Vera Smith, Fred and Bess Parker. Thank you all very much, we appreciate your assistance and hope you all enjoyed the trip and the beautiful day.

Pastor Murray held a service in the lounge. Pearl Lyle's daughter Anna came Wednesday evening to see her. Anna has been to the East coast for a holiday and to visit some of her family. This week there were three ladies here who were Kellett, girls to see Lola Prentice. Lola taught them when she was teaching.

COUNTY LIBRARY NEWS

by Joel Levis

IN THE EARLY HOURS of September 1, 1939, German troops made their way across the border and into Poland. At the same time, thousands of children were crawling out of their beds in Britain, rubbing their eyes and not knowing that it would be quite a while before they would be able to crawl back into them. Within days, they would learn that a "state of war" existed between Germany and Great Britain.

In No Time to Wave Good-bye, Ben Wicks interviews many of these people and learns what it was like for children to be ripped away from the familiar and sent off to a new homes where they would be spared the heavy bombing that was feared.

For many of the people who participated, it was as if they were telling their story for the first time, even though they had long known that they were part of the greatest movement of residents from the UK in history. In their travels about the world, their past never left them. Learn about real people and real history.

Drivers' fees increased

INFORMATION NEWS

by Doreen Hawman

Effective August 1, 1989 the Ministry of Transportation changed the fee structure for specific driver and vehicle licensing.

This means that anyone whose driver's licence and/or vehicle plate validation sticker expired on or after that date is subject to the new fee.

The cost of a driver's licence renewal for three years increased to $30.00 for $21.00. passenger plate validation stickers in southern Ontario increased to $66.00 from $54.00 and in northern Ontario to $18.00 from $15.00. For a motor-assisted bicycle validation sticker increased to $12.00 from $9.00.

The Plate validation sticker fee for commercial motor vehicles weighing 3000 kilograms or less, for personal use only, increased to $66.00 from $54.00 in southern Ontario. In northern Ontario, to $33.00 from $27.00.

The fee for an original driver's licence and for a replacement driver's licence increased to $10.00 from $7.00.

If you have a question that needs answering or require help completing an application, you are invited to contact your nearest Information Centre. For the convenience of residents of the Minden area, the centre located in the Municipal building, Milne Street is now open Monday and Tuesday of each week.

UCW meet October 4

CARNARVON NEWS

by Ann McKay

The U.C.W. meeting will be held in the Christian Education Building at 7:30 PM on October 4. The guest speaker will be Rev. Douglas Conlan of Lindsay, who will speak on the subject of Special Gifts and Stewardships. Everyone Welcome.

We were please to have Muriel Brown with us for a few days. Muriel was a school teacher here for many years, before retiring to Brampton. She was the guest of Mrs. Clair Brown.

Many truck loads of material have passed my door for the past few days, for the Stanhope Airport renovations. A better use for the tax payer's money would surely be, the Haliburton Hospital Continuing Care Unit which will benefit everyone.

Sikkens' Cetol 1 and Cetol 23

So the natural beauty of your exterior woodwork doesn't fade in the sunlight

Sikkens' Cetol 1 and Cetol 23 wood-finishing systems consist of special pigments that allow visible light to pass through but reflect damaging ultraviolet rays, thereby ensuring the colour longevity of both the wood and the finish. Maintain the natural beauty of your exterior woodwork with effective, easy-to-apply Cetol 1 and Cetol 23.

THE HEART FACTS

Q. How does what I eat relate to my chances of having a heart attack or stroke?

A. If you eat fatty foods - such as butter, whole milk, ice cream, cream cheeses - or use saturated oil in cooking, your body is taking in too much fat. Eating these foods can lead to a build-up of fatty deposits in the arteries of your heart. Clogged arteries are the leading cause of heart attack and stroke.

IN MEMORIAM

SIBLEY—In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother AMELIA who passed away September 24, 1987. We hold you close within our hearts until we meet again. Forever missed by Ev, Ted and Family.
32-P-27

IN LOVING MEMORY

of a dear son and brother Jeffrey Bulst (Fryer) who's life was taken in a motorcycle accident September 29, 1987. It is hard when our loved ones have reached their day. When they say good-bye to all; But harder by far when they pass away With no good-bye at all. Could we have been there at the hour of death To catch the last sigh of his parting breath, His last faint whisper we might have heard, And breathed in his ear one loving word. Lovingly remembered by Dad, Mom, John and Jamie.
